Five Are Great.
Exit Mrs. Lot.
Two Fine Frenchmen.
Berlin's Flaming Youth.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

EMIL LUDWIG, whose biographies of Napoleon and Bismarck are popular, has chosen for the "Four Great Americans" Edison, Jane Addams, Rockefeller, Orville Wright, and is looking for a fifth. He will select Henry Ford if he is as intelligent as his books sound. "Greatness" is hard to define. Edison and Ford are the two most useful Americans, with perhaps one exception. Edison supplied light; Ford distributed 15,000,000 gasoline wagons to ride around in the light, setting the country free from the law of gravitation.

THE exception would be John D. Rockefeller. History may call him the most useful American. He has proved that competition is not economical, efficient or necessary, killing a most harmful economic superstition.

LOT'S wife looked back, although told not to, and was changed to a pillar of salt. A column of salt near the Dead Sea called "formerly Lot's Wife" is now to be abolished by cold-hearted British owners of a cession to work Dead Sea deposits.

Once that column of salt was taken most seriously. Irenaeus, the martyr, vouched for its genuineness and believed "that the soul of Lot's wife still lingered in the statue, giving it a sort of organic life."

Andrew D. White, once president of Cornell University, wrote about that.

Many religions have similar traditions. Mecca, to which good Mohammedans go on pilgrimage, shows the black stone of the Casaba from which Mohammed rose to heaven. An angel warned by the Almighty to keep Adam away from the forbidden fruit neglected his duty and was changed to stone.

Tradition made Mrs. Lot's salt statue unusual. Rain could not wash away the salt, wind could not overthrow the pillar, and any wound made in the lady of salt was instantly and miraculously healed.

COSTES and Lebrix, French fliers recently received by President Coolidge, deserve the admiration of this country and of the world.

In 212 hours 57 minutes actual flying time they have covered 21,848 miles. Their average flying speed was nearly 30 miles an hour faster than Col. Lindbergh's, a great tribute to French airplane construction.

"FLAMING YOUTH," dancing, drinking and shooting, worries other countries also. Lawyers from Japan, France and Britain are watching a Berlin murder trial. Hans Krantz, aged nineteen, helped his young friend, Scheller, and Scheller's sister, Hildegard, to pass an evening pleasantly with dancing, tobacco and much drink. Hildegard, only sixteen, smuggled a friend, Otto Stephan, into her bedroom, and Hans, attached to Hildegard, told the girl's brother he ought to kill Stephan. He did it, then killed himself.

The question is, did Krantz commit murder when he told his friend, "avenge your sister's honor by killing the man?"

KAISERS, Emperors, Sultans are not what they were. Berlin hisses the former Kaiser, appearing in a movie picture. Germans have not forgotten the Kaiser's bragging, drinking officers that kicked young German recruits on slight provocation, slapped their faces, called them pigs, and crowded off the sidewalk "common citizens" that paid for the army.

CONSTANTINOPLE sees a moving picture called, "Abdul Hamid, The Red Sultan," showing methods and crimes of the last of their Sultans. It is much enjoyed by modern Turks wearing the derby hat instead of the fez.

The "Red Sultan's" thirteen exiled children made a futile effort to have the film seized by a Paris court.

SANDINO, Nicaragua's energetic bandit leader, tells British residents not to be frightened. He is only "after the Yankees" American marines can't fight, says he, and when he meets them "blood will flow."

Sandino's band of 150 ought to be persuaded, as kindly as possible, that their plan, to wipe out by violence a treaty between Nicaragua's government and the United States, will not be successful.

13 Dead in Oil Still Blast

By International News Service.

EVERETT, Mass., Feb. 11.—Death toll in the explosion and fire horror at the plant of the Beacon Oil Company was swelled to 13 today.

Ten bodies were found within the ruined plant by firemen as soon as they were able to batter their way inside.

Today two died at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston. In addition, workers today sighted a body of a man jammed in the wreckage. This brought the known dead to 13. Firemen and other searchers continued to dig in the debris for other bodies. Four workmen are missing.

The identified dead:

CHARLES POIRIER of Wakefield.
EZEKIAH MUGFORD of Wakefield.
MICHAEL BURGESS of Charlestown.
JOHN COLLINS of Cambridge.
GEORGE DOHERTY, 42, married.
MICHAEL GILLIGAN of Malden.
JOSEPH LANDRIGAN of Everett.
DONALD McINTOSH of Everett.
PETER RAUSEO, 25, of Everett; foreman of oil works.
PETER DAVIS, 23, of East Somerville.

PROBES LAUNCHED

While firemen were still digging in the debris, three joint probes of the disaster were under way to determine the cause of the explosion and fire that followed and to fix the responsibility.

All except a few of the 32 injured at various hospitals were expected to recover. Six persons were injured seriously.

All that was known was that one of the low-pressure vaporizers in one of the distilling buildings blew up. This blast was followed by several smaller explosions. In the still houses oil is distilled under high pressure to a vapor which runs through a vaporizer. The gasoline, reduced to liquid, runs off to huge storage tanks. There is a battery of 20 still houses, each of which has a high vaporizing tower. It was in one of these stills that the explosion came with blinding force.

Workmen on platforms surrounding the towers and vaporizers were blown from their perches.

Throughout the night arc lights threw a glare over the ruins of the various buildings destroyed by explosions and fire and dawn found hysterical women—wives, mothers sisters and daughters—outside the police line.

FEAR 53 ARE DEAD IN MINE

FUMES HALT AID

By International News Service.

TIMMINS, Ontario, Feb. 11.—Two special trains, one from Toronto, the other from Pittsburgh, carrying a mine rescue car, gas masks and other fire-fighting equipment, are en route here today to aid in the rescue work at Hollinger mine, where six men are known dead and 47 others are trapped by fire.

Rescue work was halted pending the arrival of special trains rushing here from Pittsburgh and Toronto with smoke fighting equipment and experts in rescue work.

Rescue efforts cannot be resumed until late today, it is believed, on account of the gas, smoke and flames. After dying down early last night, the fire grew worse again at midnight.

This is the first major tragedy in the history of the Ontario gold fields. The fire is believed to have started from spontaneous combustion at a dump on the 550-foot level.

GAS FILLS MINE

It was some time before the seriousness of the situation was realized and the 1,000 miners could be warned in all sections of the workings. Carbon monoxide gas soon permeated the workings to such an extent that gas masks were useless. A canary lowered in a cage lived two minutes.

Through the night the wives and children of the imprisoned miners kept vigil at the minehead, weeping and praying.

Six bodies have been recovered. The only two identified were those of Martin Steens, shaft boss, and Ira Graham. Death had been caused by suffocation from smoke and carbon monoxide gas.

Between 800 and 900 men made their way safely out of the mine yesterday.

There were conflicting reports of the source of the blaze, the most authentic being that it had started in a pile of rubbish on the 550-foot level. The fire was discovered yesterday morning shortly after the day shift of miners had gone to work at 8 o'clock.

TWO SENATE COAL MINE PROBES ASSURED

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Two different Senatorial investigations of conditions existing in the coal fields of Western Pennsylvania were virtually assured today following preliminary hearings on the strike situation conducted by Senate committees.

While the Committee on Interstate Commerce late Friday was agreeing unanimously to favorably recommend some sort of investigation, the Judiciary Committee, meeting in another part of the Capitol, was seriously considering a proposal made by its chairman, Senator George Norris of Nebraska, calling for a special inquiry into the issuance of injunctions by Federal courts in Pennsylvania and elsewhere.

Senator Norris was determined that such an investigation should be conducted by his committee, and is said to be prepared to press the matter to a conclusion. Further hearings will be held on the subject before a report is filed.

The agreement of the Interstate Commerce Committee to report the resolution of inquiry by Senator Hiram Johnson of California, came after several hours of hearings.

Two Shot In Pistol Duel

A duel between cousins in the kitchen of a South Side residence early today in which one participant sought revenge for a black eye he had received from his relative shortly before resulted in both being wounded, one believed to be dying.

Rocco DiLiberatore, 35, of 704 Sarah street, and Alexander Oretti, 28, of 70 South Eleventh street, were the participants. The duel occurred in the South Eleventh street house.

Both men went to St. Joseph's Hospital, where it was said that Oretti, who had suffered a bullet wound in the back, was in a serious condition. DiLiberatore had been shot in the right shoulder and the right hand.

The cousins had been drinking together in the Hill district in the evening, according to police. An argument and a fight arose, police say.

During the melee Oretti is said to have struck and blackened one of DiLiberatore's eyes. They returned to their homes alone. Shortly after retiring Oretti is said to have been summoned by a knock on the door. As he came downstairs to answer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., one of the world's richest men, came before the Senate Oil Investigating Committee today to lend what aid he could in exploring the mysteries of the Continental Trading Company's $3,000,000 Liberty bond "slush fund."

Prior to his appearance on the witness stand, the oil magnate held an hour's conference with Senator Thomas J. Walsh (Dem.), of Montana, in the latter's office. Walsh is the prosecutor of the oil investigation.

Rockefeller wore a grey suit. A diamond stickpin nestled in the folds of a purple tie. He answered Walsh's questions in a low voice, but which had sufficient carrying power to reach every corner of the packed committee room.

After giving his name and residence, Walsh asked him about his holdings in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

"My personal holdings consist of 402,780 shares. The Rockefeller Foundation has 400,760 shares, the University of Chicago holds 30,000 shares, there is also a trust fund of slightly more than 500,000 shares held by the Equitable

ENDURANCE TEST IS HALTED

By International News Service.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Charles A. Levine, trans-Atlantic flier, and Lieut. Wilmer Stultz, commercial pilot, were forced to postpone their proposed attempt to capture the world's endurance flight record, when their monoplane, the "Columbia," met with an accident as they were taking off today. The tail skid of the machine was smashed, but neither of the occupants was injured.

The attempted take-off was made at precisely 10 o'clock. After saying their farewells to relatives and friends, Levine and Stultz started the "Columbia" down the runway, with Stultz at the stick.

Two hundred feet from the starting point, however, Stultz swerved the plane suddenly to avoid striking an automobile which stood directly in the path of the plane and a tail skid and the rudder post broke.

There was a rush toward the plane. Levine climbed out sheepishly. He was unhurt. He was followed by Stultz and both began an examination of the plane.

"I don't think it's damaged very badly," said Levine. "We'll take off tomorrow. This is sure a bad break of luck."

"My own holdings, as you will readily see, is about 4½ per cent of the capital stock. The Rockefeller Foundation's share is a trifle over 5 per cent. I am chairman of the board and chairman of the finance committee of the foundation.

"The University of Chicago holds less than 1 per cent. I am not connected in any way with that institution.

"All of this stockholding is just under 15 per cent of the capital stock. I want to make this clear because I have judged by published reports that there is a popular misunderstanding about this.

"My sense of responsibility and obligations makes me want to do everything in my power to uncover everything connected with this important situation."

"I view with you the important public interests at stake here. Mor than that, I have large investments in this industry. More than that, my father was the founder of the oil industry and there are additional reasons why I should be more eager than you that you get all the facts.

"The whole oil industry is under suspicion.

"The business structure of the whole country is under suspicion. The cynic is asking whether there is anything like basic integrity in business. I hope all the facts will be brought to light and the cloud of suspicion that has covered it, will be dispelled."

Rockefeller asked the committee to "bear with me another moment," and Walsh said, "Go ahead."

The oil king then said he had every confidence in the integrity of Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the Standard Oil of Indiana.

"I am bitterly disappointed—more so than you are—in his refusal to answer all your questions," said Rockefeller.

"I totally disagree with him as to the wisdom of the position he has taken."

The oil king told of trying three years ago to persuade Stewart to testify. He said he had wired officials of the Standard of Indiana March, 1925, telling them to tell

"Col. Stewart showed resentment at implications in my telegram that he had purposely absented himself from the country," said Rockefeller. "I meant no such implication.

"He stated to me that as far as he himself and his company was concerned, the transaction was not improper.

"He stated further that he was thoroughly of the belief that the transaction was to the best interests of his company and the best he could make.

"I believed then and I believe now that Col. Stewart told the truth to this committee."

Rockefeller declared he would do everything he could to help "in exposing the wrong that apparently has been done."

"I am watching this situation with the greatest interest," he added.

"I am prepared in this instance, as in other cases involving my stock holdings, to act on the evidence," said Rockefeller, without saying which way he would act.

"When I no longer can maintain confidence in the integrity of an official, I will withdraw my support from him."

Rockefeller gave his views on "good business methods."

"I believe the business of the country should be done in a sound and fair way," he said.

"I want no profits derived from a compromise with right. I want no profits produced by officers or employes who have compromised with right.

"I have given my life to philantrophic endeavors. I am not an active business man, but hold stock in many companies.

"My father's greatest contribution to this country was not in philanthrophy, but in investing large sums of money in business that gave useful service to the public, fair profits and adequate wages to employes, so they can enjoy proper living conditions,

"I judge," Walsh said when Rockefeller finished his statement, "from what you said that you had two conferences with Col. Stewart."

"Yes, sir. In New York City."

"Do you recall ever having heard anything of the general features of the Continental Trading Company transaction?"

Rockefeller said his only information about the oil cases came from reading the newspapers.

CORRUGATED IRON WALLS BLOWN OUT

Every section of the corrugated iron wall on the east side of the cork mill of the Armstrong Cork Company, Beaver Falls, was blown out when an explosion of cork dust occurred yesterday burning seven employes. Four of the injured were not working in the cork dust department, but were eating their lunches there. Nicola Ferlaino (inset) was burned about the face, arms and chest. He is in the Providence Hospital, Beaver Falls, in a critical condition. He lived at 1410 Second avenue, and had been in this country but a year. Robert Simpkins, 35, 2225 Eighth avenue, and Edward Mitchell, 35, 2013 Eleventh avenue, both of Beaver Falls, are in the Providence Hospital. Arthur Tanner, 32, colored, 327 Seventh avenue, New Brighton, was badly burned and is in the Beaver Valley Hospital, New Brighton. TWO COAL PROBES HERE LIKELY during which Philip Murray of Pittsburgh, vice president of the United Mine Workers of America, gave a sordid recital of conditions in the Western Pennsylvania mines.

Representatives of the operators failed to appear in opposition, with the result that the committee, meeting in executive session later, decided unanimously to urge an investigation.

SCOPE OF INQUIRY

However, according to Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, chairman of the latter committee, it will be necessary to defer formal action until next week, pending any agreement as to what form the investigation will take. Three points are to be decided.

First, whether the inquiry should be conducted by the Interstate Commerce Committee, or whether it will be left to a special select committee appointed for the purpose.

Second, whether it shall embrace the proposal of Senator David A. Reed, Pennsylvania, contemplating a study of railroad coal rates applying to the Pittsburgh district.

Third, whether the investigation shall be held in Washington or nearer the scene of the strike at Pittsburgh.

It was explained that while there is a unanimity of opinion on the necessity for recommending the inquiry, several members of the committee had different ideas as to how it should be done. Senator Sackett of Kentucky also wanted an opportunity to address the body on the railroad rate question before final action is taken.

The next meeting is set for Monday, when a report may be forwarded to the chamber. Over the week-end it is expected that members of the committee will turn the situation over in their minds and be ready to outline a definite course of action.

During his testimony before the committee yesterday Murray charged that Governor Fisher of Pennsylvania had been dominated by the Mellon interests in lending full aid to the mine operators in destroying the effectiveness of the strike. He complained that some 4,000 state commissions have been issued to coal and iron police employed by the operators. In addition, he said, hundreds of other paid officers of the coal companies are wearing state police uniforms without authority and are roaming over the strike area with a free hand.

If an investigation is ordered by the Senate Murray said mine union officials expected to prove that a reign of lawlessness has prevailed throughout the Pittsburgh district since the beginning of the strike. More than 85 murders have been committed, he charged, adding that wives and young daughters of workers have been ravished by renegade strikebreakers without, in many cases, any sincere effort being made by state police to apprehend the criminals.

CHARGES IMMORALITY

He painted another unseemly picture of bawdy houses, which it was charged, have sprung up with the strike, and which he said are inhabited by prostitutes brought in from over the country by the coal companies. A repetition was made of the charge also that dope peddlers and prohibition law violators are running rampant in the district.

Murray then gave a list of grievances chargeable to the operators, as he testified. Mention was made of the recent firing of several hundred shots into a school house at Bruceton, Pa. Several specific cases of women and young girls being assaulted were told to the committee.

Preceding the Pittsburgh labor leader on the stand, Senator Johnson appeared in support of his own resolution and informed the committee that he was convinced a full inquiry is demanded in view of the distressing situation that prevails.

"NO THIRD TERM" VOTE AIMED AT COOLIDGE

By FRASER EDWARDS
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—After three days of the bitterest partisan debate in years, the Senate, by the vote of 56 to 26, formally notified President Coolidge that it is opposed to a third term for Presidents.

As originally drafted, the resolution by Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin would have commended President Coolidge for observing the two-term tradition established by George Washington.

That provision was stricken out after Senator Fess of Ohio, originator of the "Draft Coolidge for a Third Term" movement, and other Republican senators fought against it. So the resolution as passed advised Mr. Coolidge:

"That it is the sense of the Senate that the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

In accepting the Fess amendment to strike out the commendatory clause, LaFollette made it plain that he did so at the insistence of the President's closest friends and warmest supporters. The insistence of Fess and others that Mr. Coolidge could repudiate his "I do not choose to run" statement and become a candidate for a third term, LaFollette said made passage of the resolution "all the more important."

In well-informed political circles, the bitter opposition of Fess and his followers to the commendatory clause was construed as another anti-Hoover move. It was pointed out that many in that influential group, while favorable to the candidacy of the Secretary of Commerce, have become convinced that he will be unable to make the grade for the Republican nomination.

CADDY STRUCK, ASK $5,000

Mrs. Margaret Tyler filed the suit for Martin Tyler who, the papers contend, was in bed 11 days with injuries to the head received from a ball driven by L. R. McClure of Pittsburgh on the course of the Shannopin Country Club at Bellevue.

The Tyler boy, caddying for another golfer, was standing some distance in front of McClure when the latter drove off, it was averred.

Neighbors summoned Police Lieut. John P. Joyce and Motorcycle Patrolmen Louis M. Foster and Joseph Hickey. The wounded men were found in the hospital and charges of being suspicious persons were placed against them.

Michael Marcho, 28, a resident of the house where the shooting occurred, was lodged in the South Side Police Station, charged with being a suspicious person.

Fate of Missing Deputies And Prisoners Unsolved

OVERCOAT FAILS AS CLUE

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 11.—(AP.)—A bloodstained overcoat found on a highway near Lebanon, west of here, last Tuesday on the same day two local deputy sheriffs disappeared while taking two prisoners to the state reformatory at Pendleton, 70 miles east of here, had not been identified today as belonging to one of the four men.

The coat, turned over to officials yesterday by the farmers who found it, was at first believed to have belonged to either John P. Grove, or Wallace McClure, deputy sheriffs who left here in an automobile last Tuesday with John Burns and Samuel Baxter, both sentenced to serve five to twenty-five years for robbery.

Police believe the deputies have met harm at the hands of the two prisoners, who were seen at the home of Burns' uncle near Danville, Ill., several hours after leaving here in custody of the deputies. The automobile in which the four men left here, the prisoners handcuffed together in the tonneau, was being driven by Burns and Baxter.

As a result of futile search of every outbuilding and woods in this section of the state officials today thought it possible that the two aged deputies may have been slain and thrown into the Wabash river, which the prisoners crossed in order to reach Danville. It was pointed out the two youths threw a stolen cash register into the river a few miles below Lafayette.

TEAM WINS ON FLOOR, LOSES TO POLICE

KANE, Pa., Feb. 11.—Bradford High School's basketball team won its game with Mt. Jewett High last night but it lost a later decision to the Mt. Jewett police force.

Following the game, 30 persons, including the coach, the manager, the team and visiting students were arrested by the police force, Chief Fred Falkinburg, and locked up in the borough jail for the theft of $2.50 worth of pipes from a Mt. Jewett store.

The prisoners were released when they paid the $2.50 and left town shouting threats of legal action.

The police force had tried to arrest the players while the game was in progress, but the crowd shouted him down. So the chief seized the Bradford High bus, and when the visiting squad had piled into it after the victory he commandeered it as a police patrol and ordered the outfit to the hoosegow.

'Fox' Hears His Fate Today

By International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 11.—The legal battle to save William Edward Hickman from the noose showed indications today of stretching out over a prolonged period of time, as guards prepared to escort the convicted kidnaper-killer of Marian Parker to Super Judge J. J. Trabucco's court, where he will be arraigned for sentence.

It was regarded as virtually certain that Hickman's case will go to the California Supreme Court. If Judge Trabucco denies defense attorneys' request for a new trial, an appeal probably will be taken to the higher tribunal, based on the contention that the new statute under which Hickman was tried is unconstitutional.

The new law, which allowed Hickman to enter a plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity," places only the question of sanity in the hands of the jury, leaving the determination of the degree of guilt up to the judge. From this particular phase of the law Hickman's attorneys are expected to mold their argument of unconstitutionality in the event that their request for a new trial is denied.

Jerome Walsh, chief defense counsel, and Richard Cantillon, his associate, prepared today to appear before Judge Trabucco at the time of arraignment for sentence and move for a new trial.

LOAN FIGHT SEEN AS MOTIVE

By WALTER CHAMBERS, Staff Correspondent.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Feb. 11.—Plans went ahead today to dynamite the Tuscarawas River where Sheriff Abe Laird believes now lies the body of Viola May, 23, choked to death Tuesday night by William D. Herron, 41, her sister's husband, according to his alleged confession.

At the same time Prosecuting Attorney James E. Patrick announced that Herron will be held in Tuscarawa's county jail "until a charge of murder is lodged against him." This is taken to mean that Prosecutor Patrick believes the young woman's body will be recovered, otherwise under Ohio laws Herron can be tried only for assault with intent to murder.

A score of men raked the bottom of the river from White's Bridge to Dover, a distance of three miles, but without success.

Rush D. Hiller, of Meyers Lake, Canton, failed in his effort yesterday to recover the body by dragging operations. Shortly before noon he came hurriedly ashore and declared he had brought the body almost to the surface in seven feet of water but that it had slipped back again.

TO USE DYNAMITE

Sheriff Laird, who obtained Herron's alleged confession believes the body will be recovered today. Dynamite will be used, he declared, if grapplers are unsuccessful.

Russell C. Bowers, former prosecuting attorney, retained by Herron's wife, mother and sisters to defend him, conferred with his client again today. He indicated that insanity may be the defense. The state, on the other hand, discrediting Herron's statements that he had been intimate with the dead girl over a period of four years, is reported developing the theory that after he had twice attacked her they engaged in an argument over her refusal to lend him her $1,100 savings.

The position of his wife is a novel one. She refused to believe reports of his confession, but when he confessed the crime to her in the jail she collapsed in a faint.

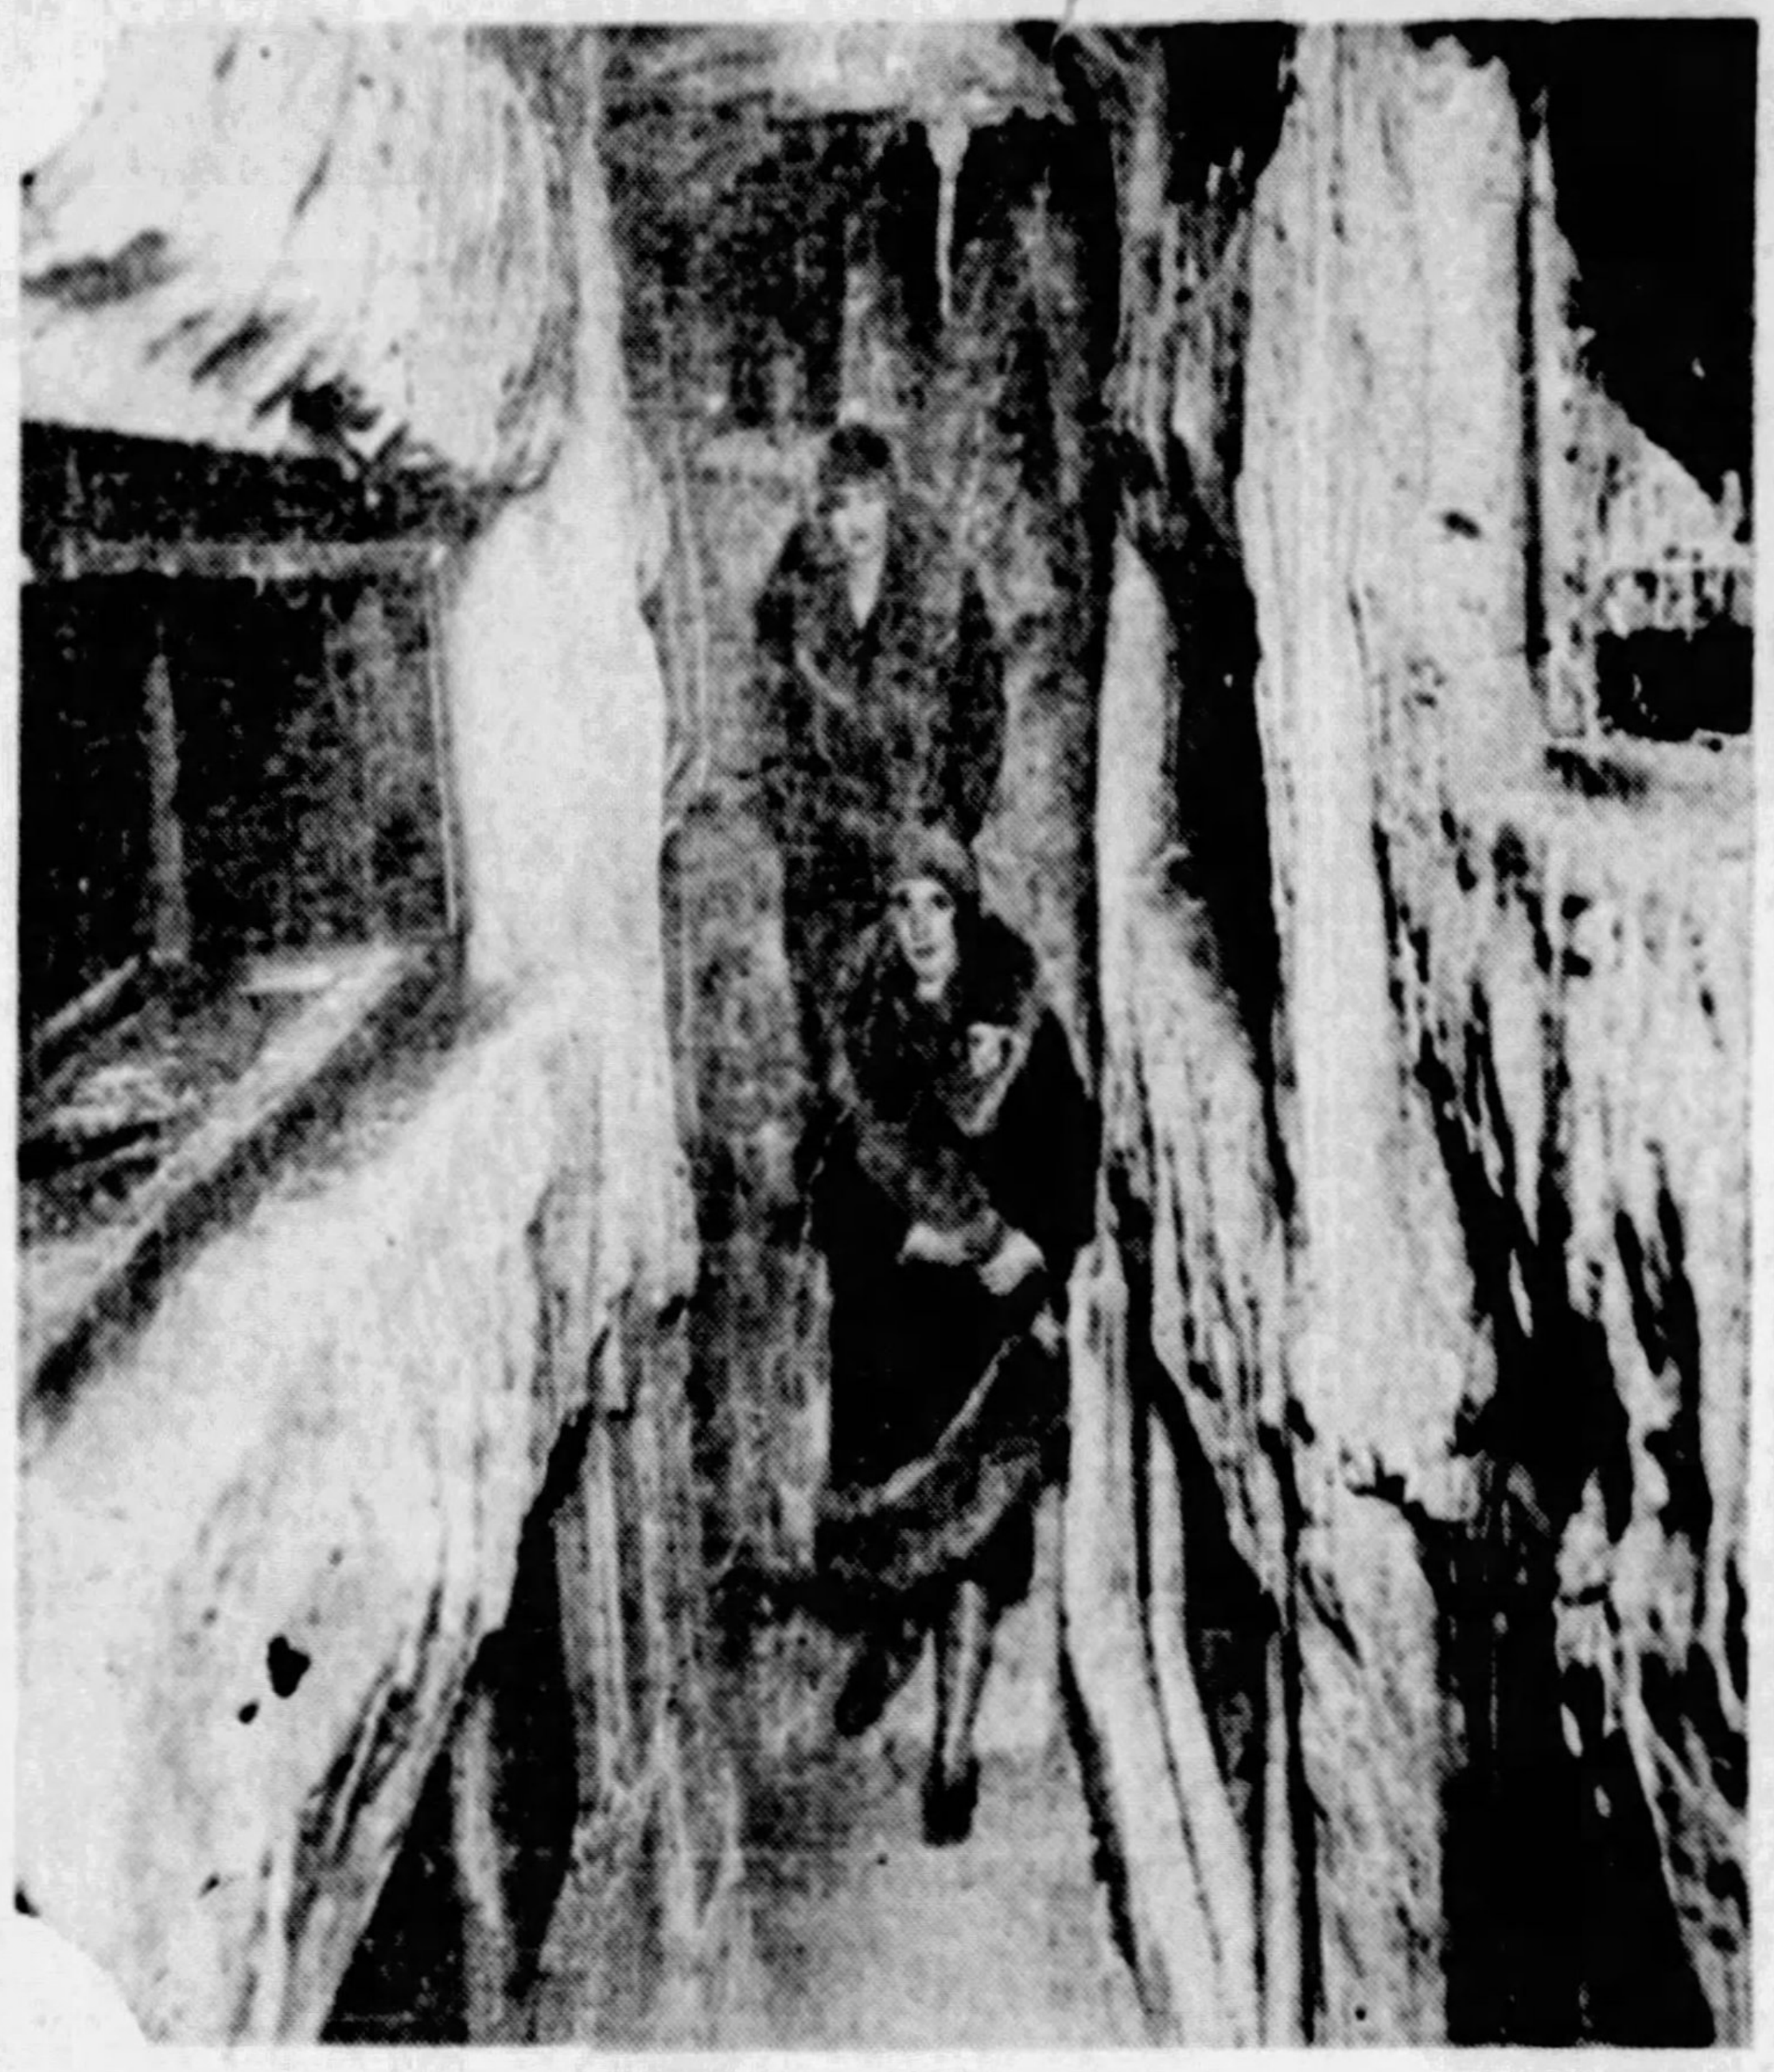
Yesterday, in company with her husband's mother, she conferred with defense counsel. They continue to occupy the same home just off the New Philadelphia-Dover boulevard.

HELD IN HIGH RESPECT

The dead girl was employed as governess-domestic in the home of Mrs. John G. Senshauser where for five years she has been treated as one of the family. Mrs. Senshauser is a cousin of Gov. A. Victor Donahey. The dead girl was well known to the Governor's family.

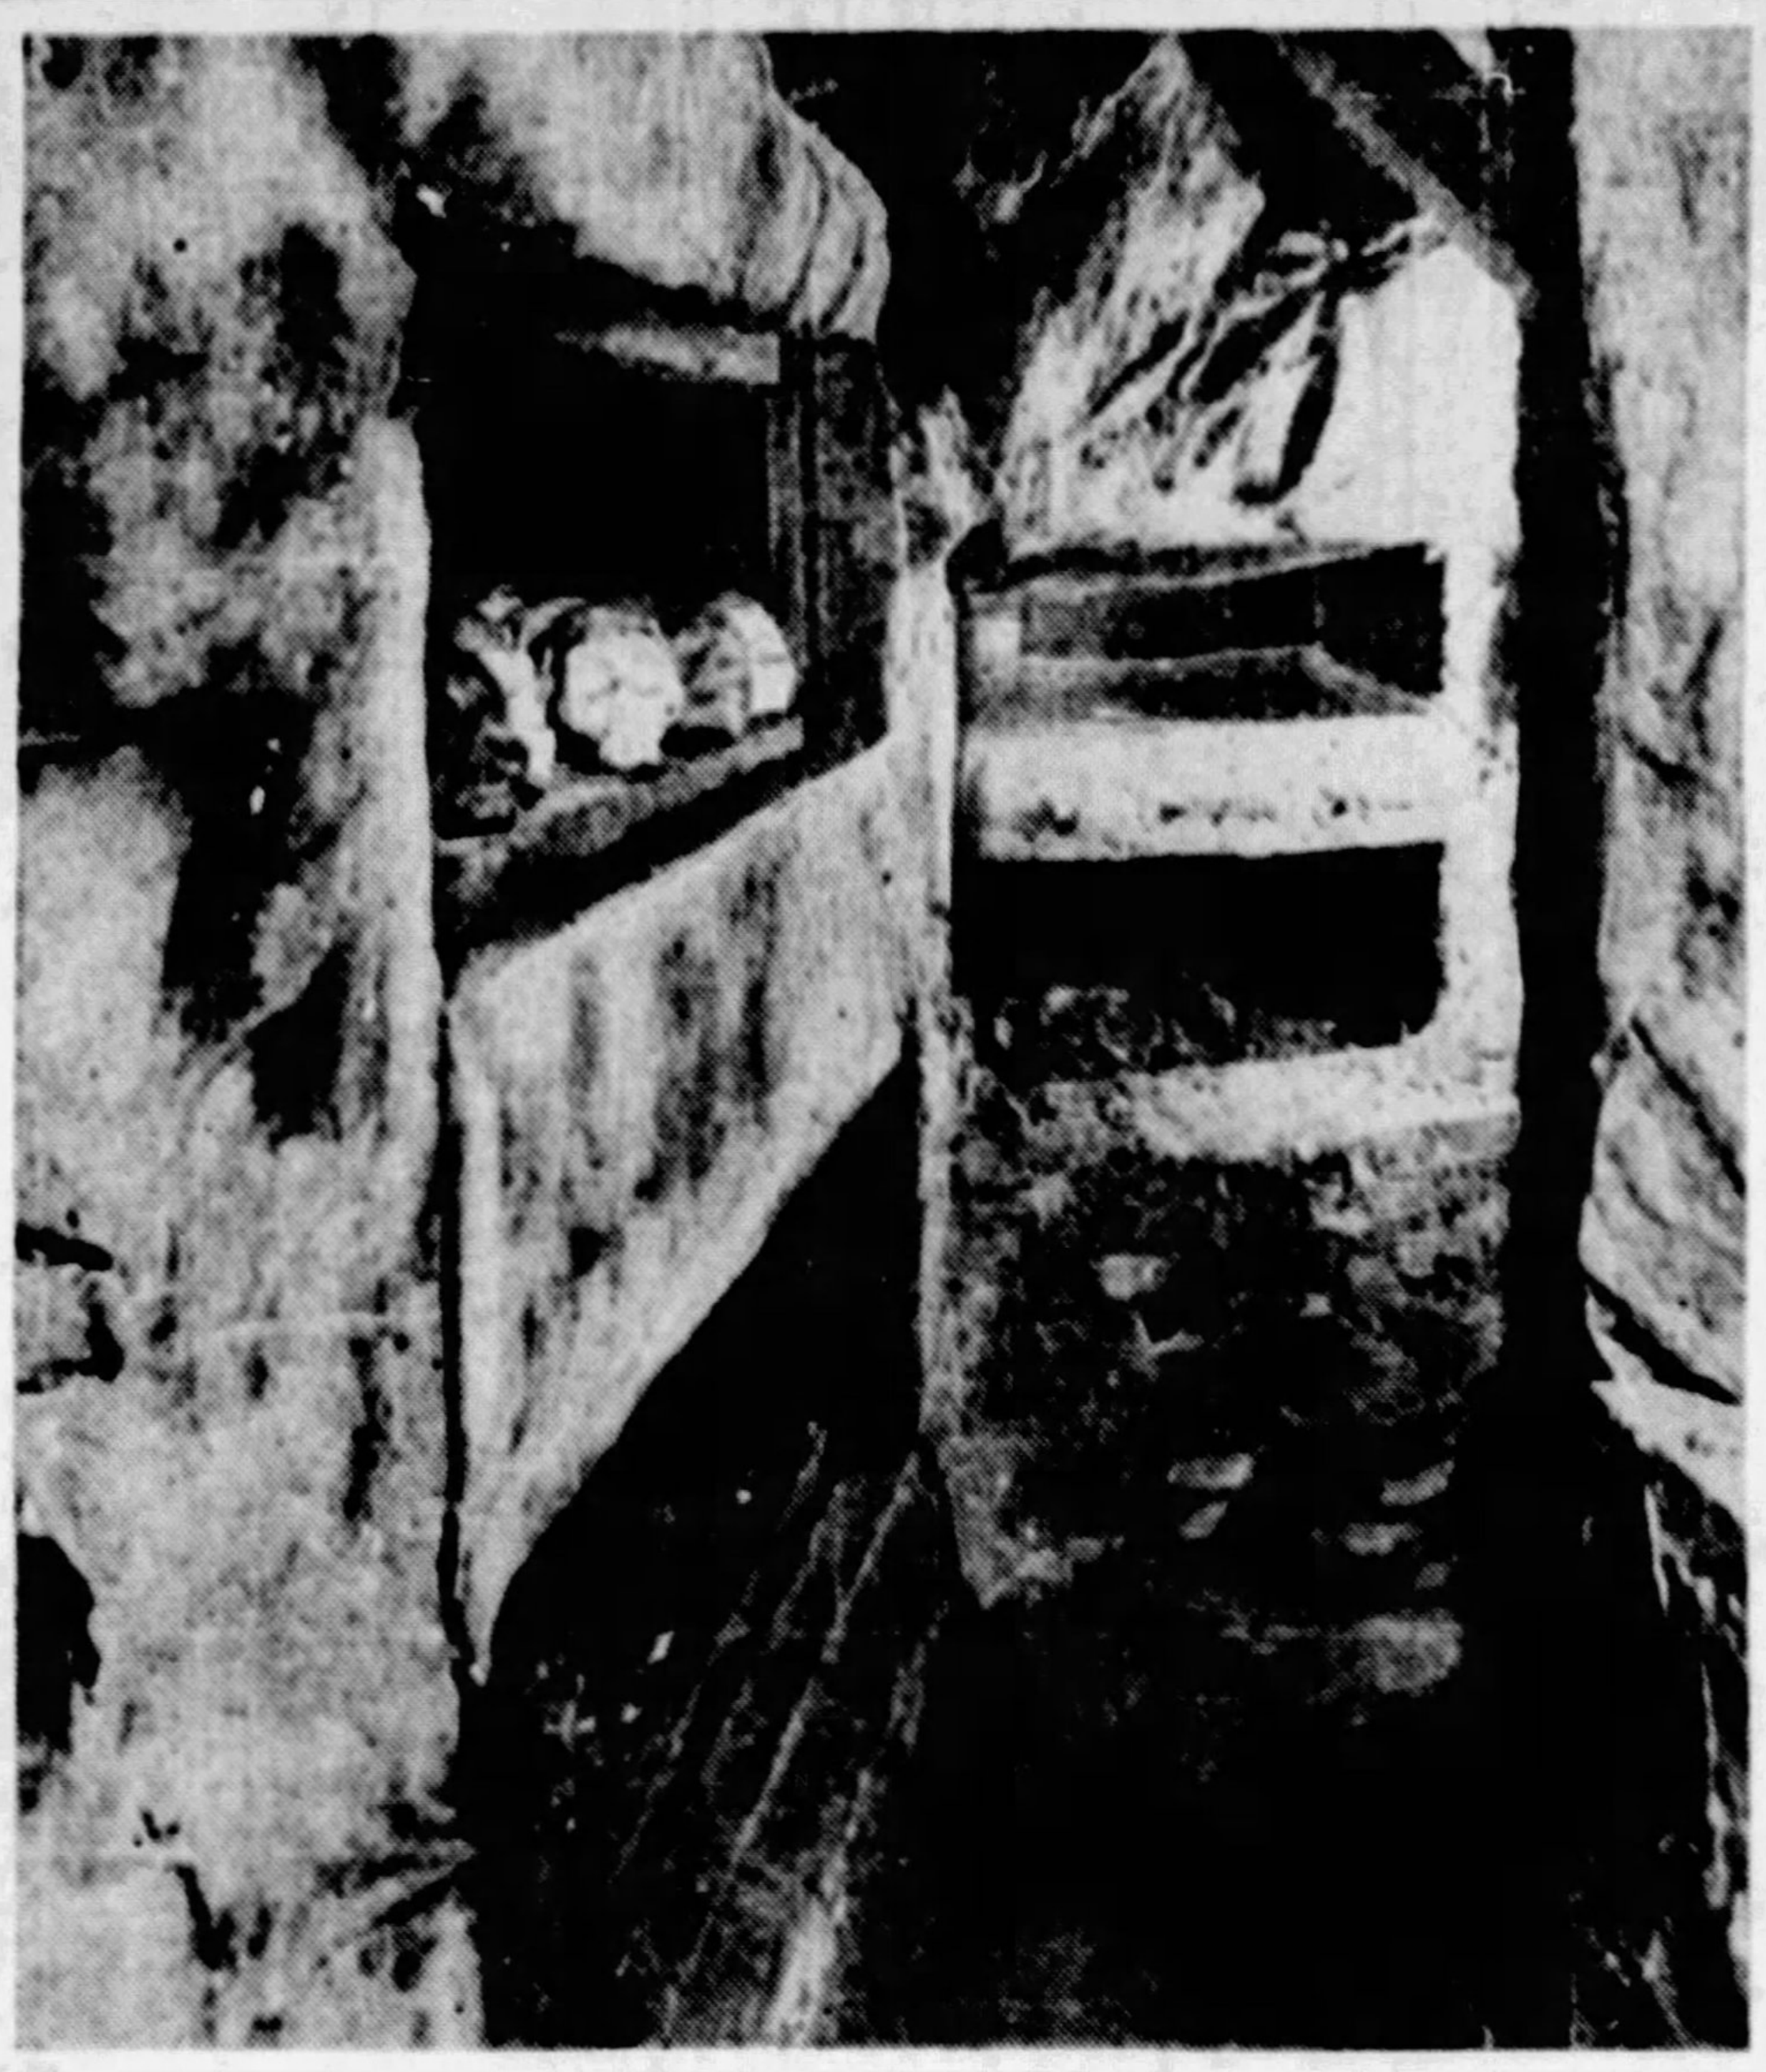
The May family is highly respected in the Stone Creek Valley section where May has become independent by reason of thrift and industry.

ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH ⁘ REPRODUCING ⁘ SAINTS' BURIAL PLACES



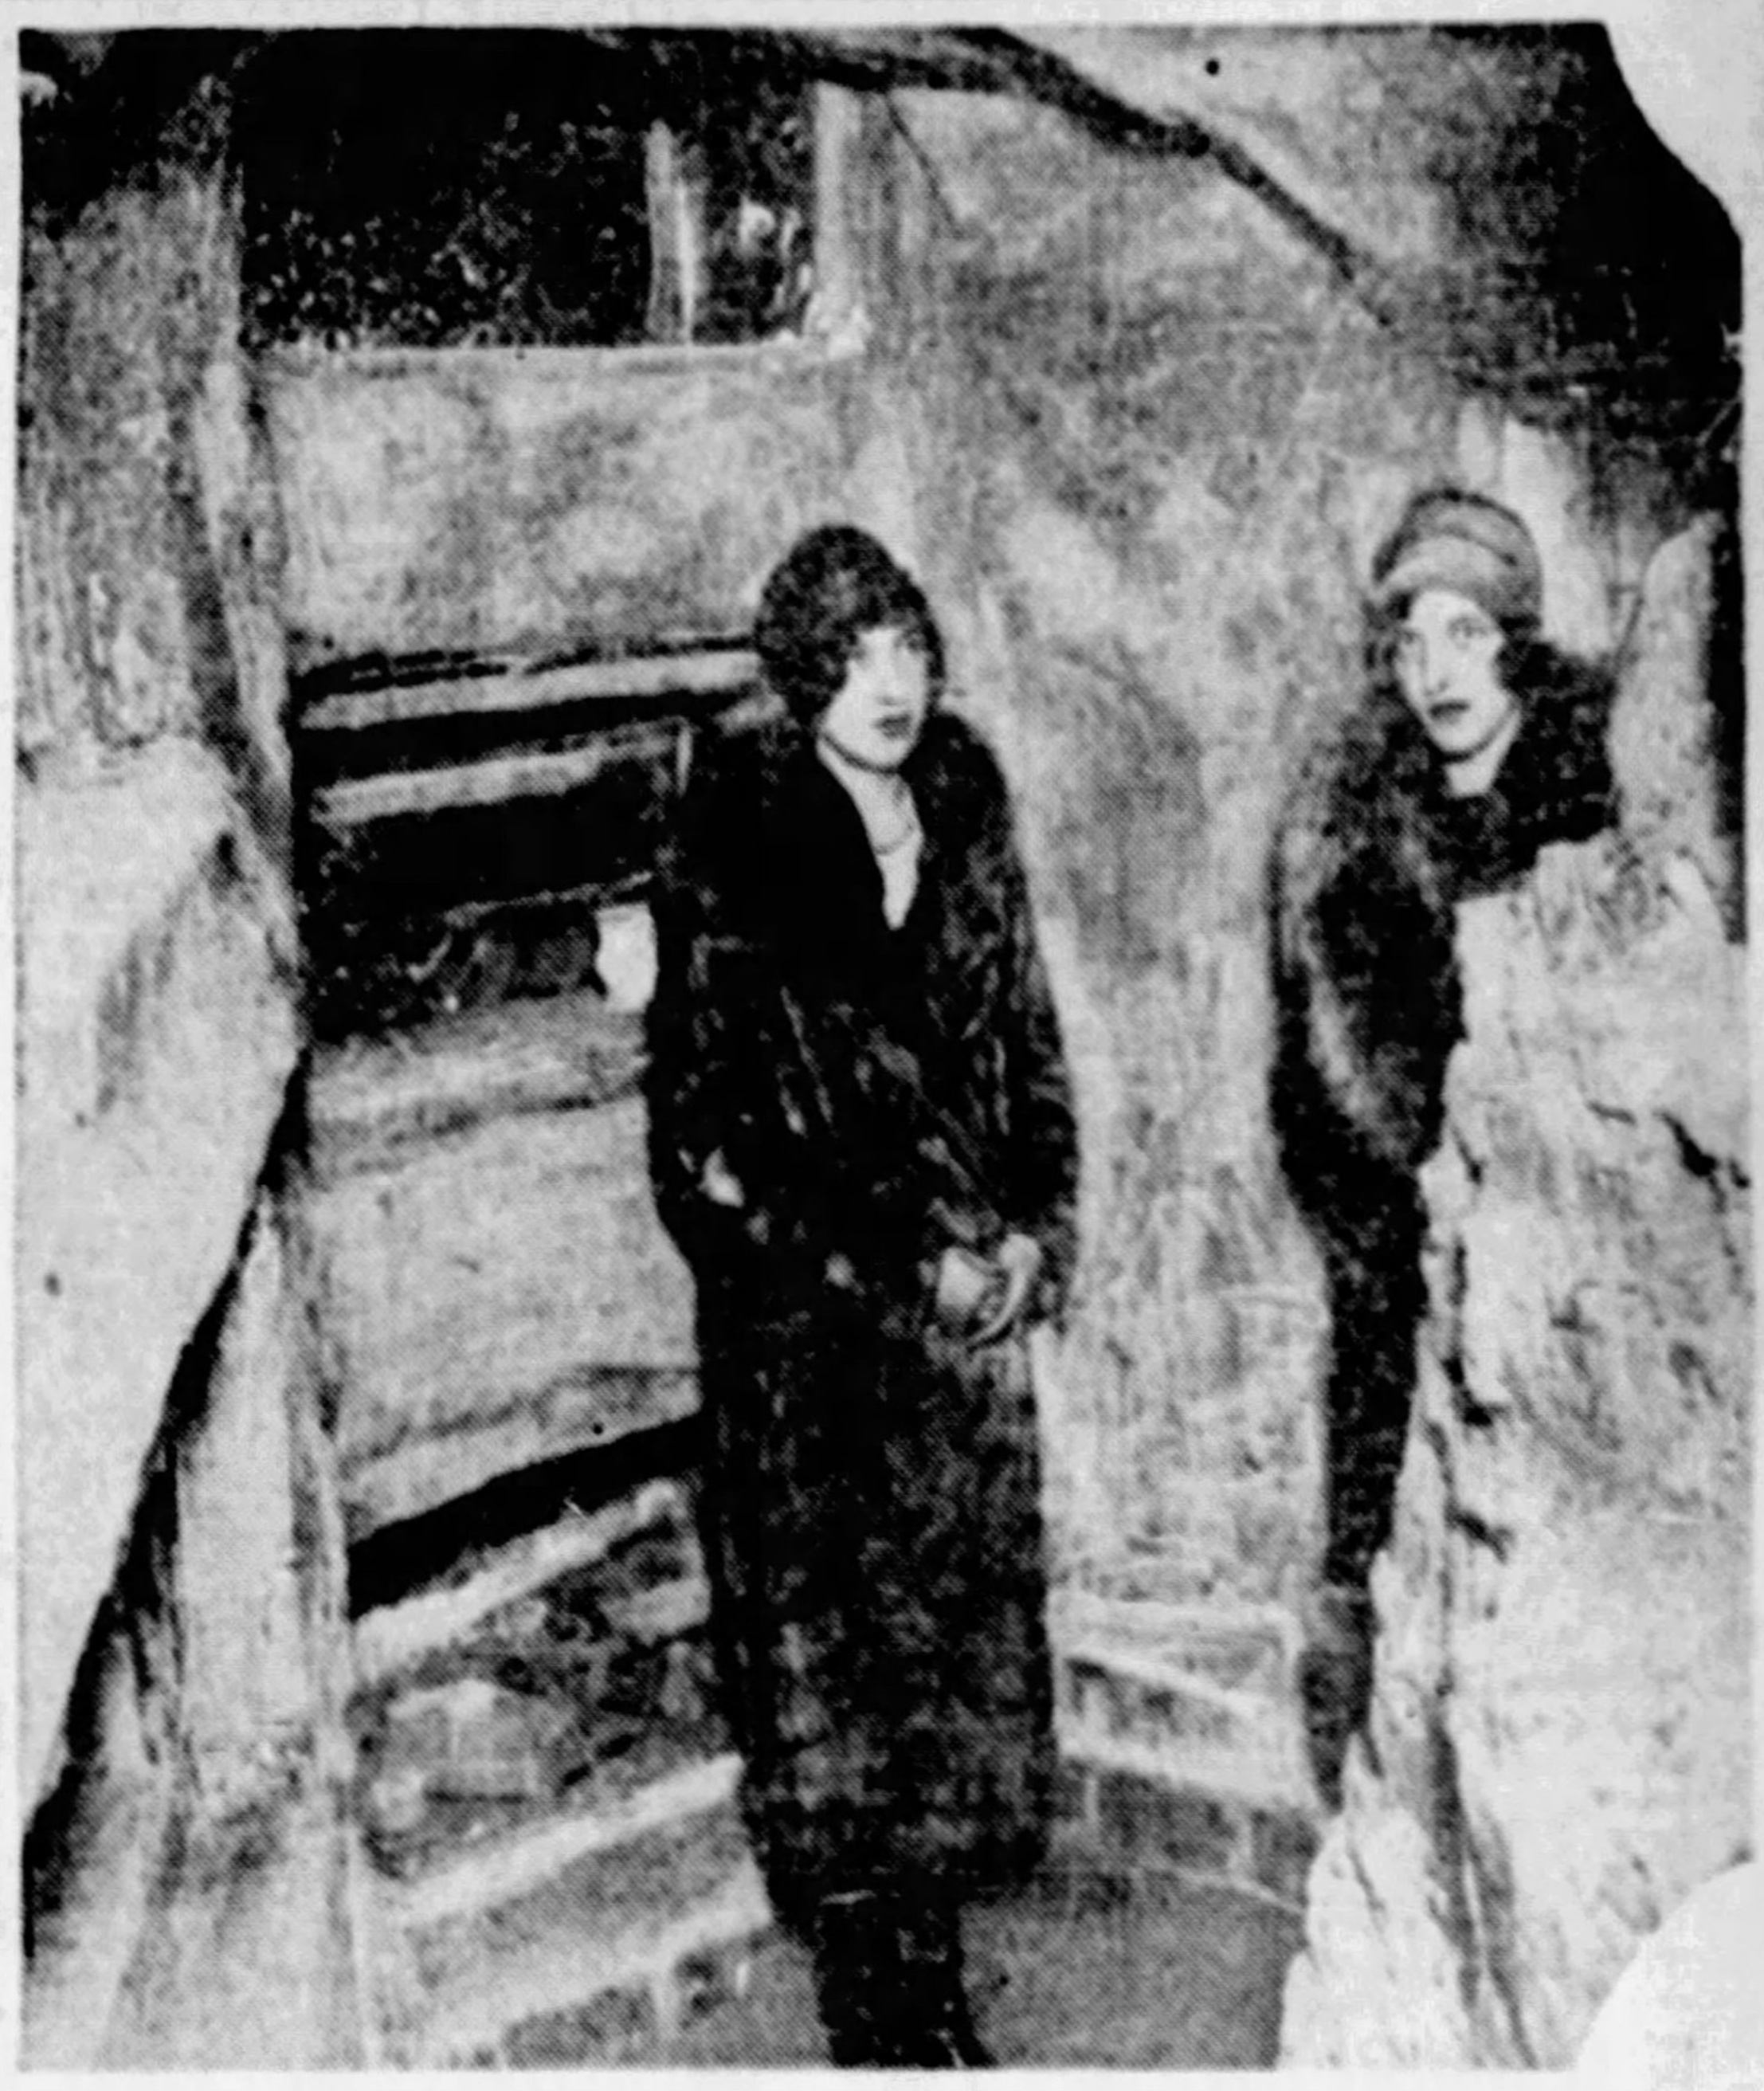
ENTERING CATACOMBS

Hundreds of feet of intricate underground galleries, or catacombs, have been excavated under old St. Patrick's Church, Seventeenth street, and a replica of the ancient burial places of the martyred saints of early Christian times constructed.



BONES AND SKULLS

The small chambers for bodies of the sainted dead are duplicated, even to skeletons. These, however, are of plaster, and are presented to give a vivid representation of how the catacombs of the early Christian world appeared.



FIRST VISITORS

The catacombs are to be opened following mass on Ash Wednesday, February 22. Roselyn Miller, who with her sister, Martha, was the first visitors, said they gave a splendid impression of the originals, which she explored in Rome. Howard Palmer, of Carnegie Tech, had charge of construction under direction of the Rev. James Cox.

GIRL JAILED AS BLACKMAILER

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 11.—Nell McCracken, 18, orphaned mountaineer who attempted to blackmail John Seger, wealthy Ligonier coal and lumber dealer out of $5,000, pleaded guilty today and was sentenced to serve one year in the county jail by Judge C. E. Whitten.

The girl had been trailed by State police to a lonely mountain cabin, where she had lived with an uncle, whom, she said, had suggested the blackmailing plan. He was arrested, but later was released for lack of evidence.

DOG'S REIGN OF TERROR ENDED WITH BULLETS

Patrolman Harry Williams, after a battle with mace and revolver, last night killed a vicious dog which for two days had been terrorizing residents of the Irwin avenue district. The animal bit and injured slightly N. Lang of 1314 Marvista street and attacked and tore the clothing of another man and three women before being killed. On Thursday the same dog attacked a motorcycle patrolman, injuring him slightly.

QUESTION 2 IN TAXI MURDER

City detectives will check up today upon the activities of Walter Cornish, 31, and John Mawkoka of McKeesport, alleged taxi bandits arrested yesterday morning near Clairton, in hope that the two prisoners now held in McKeesport might know the murderers of John G. Nesslein, Jr., 30, a cab driver whose body was found Thursday morning near Culmerville. No new clues were uncovered by county detectives investigating the murder.

Lieut. David Corbett of the homicide squad of city detectives detailed two men to question the prisoners in McKeesport, to determine their whereabouts Wednesday night and Thursday morning, during which time Nesslein was murdered.

ARREST MINER IN KILLING

Stabbed by his roommate during a quarrel in the mining town of Rillton, Westmoreland county, state police say, Frank Osolink, 53, a miner, died last night in the McKeesport Hospital.

The alleged slayer, George Stero, 40, was arrested by state police after a two-hour search of the district between Rillton and Irwin. Stero is held in the Greensburg barracks of the state police.

According to a report to the Allegheny county morgue, the two men lived together and Stero objected to the manner in which Osolink "kept house." The two fought and Osolink was stabbed in the abdomen.

9-YEAR-OLD HENRY FOOLS 'EM AGAIN

Henry Dapper spent last night fooling the police again. Henry, 9-year-old son of Howard Dapper, 2621 California avenue, is one of a pair of boys in the family who keep their father away from work a couple of days a week searching for them.

Last night Henry was found crying in Pennsylvania avenue. At the Allegheny Police Station he maintained his name was Kane and officers rode him around in an automobile for several hours trying to find his home. Henry enjoyed the ride, but the police got tired, and the boy was taken back to the station, where this morning Serg't. Samuel White recognized him as one of the Dapper boys.

Ben Lyon Is Planning to Fly Into Wedding Ceremony With Marilyn Miller, Report Says

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11.

I DON'T believe any of Ben Lyon's friends will be surprised if he and Marilyn Miller get married within the next week. Ben won't say that his eagerness to fly to New York immediately has anything to do with wedding bells, but his friends are not so reticent. They say if Ben gets to the big town the first thing he will do will be to get a marriage license. Ben has been trying for days to get a week's leave of absence from his picture work so he could fly East and see Miss Miller, but so far it hasn't been possible. He plays the lead in "Hell's Angels" and now, because of a delayed airplane and the serious accident to Howard Hughes, president of Caddo, it looks as if he might get away in a day or two. He is under contract to Caddo and will slip from "Hell's Angels" right into another picture.

The Tiffany or Carter (take your choice) cast of Leatrice Joy's next picture, "Man-Made Woman," is food for thought. Leatrice has been struggling with inferior stories and indifferent supporting casts for a long time. Now, right out of the blue California sky comes the news that she will have H. B. Warner as her leading man and Seena Owen and John Boles in important roles. Paul Stein, who directed "The Forbidden Woman," one of the best DeMille dramas of last year, will have the directing honors.

You couldn't expect Milton Sills to ignore the vogue for underworld stories, would you? No actor in his right mind ever does turn his back on public demands. Mr. Sills' next is "Nightbirds," a crook story originally titled "The Hawk." First National expects to exploit it as one of their big productions and for that reason Ben Christianson, former DeMille director, has been engaged to wield the megaphone. So far it has not been decided whether or not Doris Kenyon will play opposite her husband.

Alice Joyce had every expectation of finishing "The Rising Generation" for the Westminster Company in London and hurrying home to the U. S. A. But she is being invited to remain longer, nay, she is being urged with a very pleasant contract and another picture which will give her an opportunity to do her dramatic best. Home looms temptingly in the background and New York beckons invitingly so that Miss Joyce has not yet given her decision.

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Snow Hastens Departures for Sunny Climes

EVERYONE seems to be going some place! But who could blame anyone for preferring blue Mediterranean waters or a warm Florida sun to—well, it is rather unpleasant under foot today, isn't it?

Several Sewickleyans were among those who sailed today from New York for a Mediterranean cruise. The Albert Barnes Benneys, who live in Crabapple lane, were included in the number, and after their trip they expect to go to England to visit their son, John, who is a student at Oxford. Mrs. Frank Faber Brooks, of Shields, and her daughter, Martha, also were in the group sailing today for the Mediterranean trip.

Not all the Sewickley Valley folks, though, are attracted this year by southern Europe and Florida. For instance, the Tracy Guthries are planning to spend two or three weeks in Pas Christian, Miss. They left today, I believe. And Betty Wardrop has gone to Augusta, Ga. She is visiting Mrs. Wilson A. Campbell, of Academy avenue, who is spending the winter in the southern city.

On Thursday Mrs. Charles R. Woods, of Sewickley, came back home after visiting her daughter, Mrs. John A. Heath, Jr., in Salem, Mass. She left Salem in time to spend the week end in Atlantic City with her son, Gardner, who is a student at Princeton. And on the same day Mrs. Woods returned home Miss Lydia Thompson went back to her home in Louisville, Ky., after visiting Mrs. Charles L. Hamilton in Sewickley.

Mrs. W. W. Simpson, of Sewickley, has gone to Glendale, Cal., to spend a few weeks with her family, and also the guest of her family is Mrs. D. E. Davis. With her children, she is spending the month in Chester, Pa.

* * *

But not all of today's news comes from Sewickley. The James Willis Dalzells and their pretty little daughter, Mary Martha, have left for Coral Gables, I understand. Later, they are planning to join the Pittsburgh colony at Palm Beach. Mrs. Dalzell, you remember, was Mary Louise Dihm.

Also, the William McKennan Smiths, of Washington, Pa., with their daughter, Emsie, who came out this year, will sail next Friday on the Munargo for Nassau, in the Bahamas. Later on, they will go to Cuba and Florida and will not return home until April.

* * *

An Edgewood engagement in which you will be interested is announced today. The Charles Monroe Thorps, of Maple avenue, are making known the betrothal of their daughter, Jessie Marianne, to Edwin Williams Fiske, Jr., son of the Edwin Williams Fiskes, of Mt. Vernon, New York.

* * *

Members of the neighboring Junior Sections from Allegheny Valley, Greensburg, McKeesport, New Castle and Youngstown will be guests of the Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Juniors, at the "gold ball," to be held Wednesday night in Webster Hall. Miss Martha Cohen is chairman of the aides and hostess' committee.

* * *

Miss Jeannette Vreeland, who sang last night with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, is spending the week-end with Mrs. Robert Lee Wilson, of the King Edward apartments.

* * *

Court Chartiers, Catholic Daughters of America, will hold a pre-Lenten bridge and "500" party next Friday night. Mrs. Charles V. Wilt is general chairman. Magistrate A. D. Brandon, of Morals Court, is to address the court at its first Lenten meeting.

* * *

Miss Stella Rose, chairman for the Lake Erie College Alumnae Association's bridge party, to be held next Saturday in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, is assisted by Miss Martha Smith, in charge of tallies and cards; Miss Frances Harper, prizes; Miss Alina Naly, candy, and Miss Lydia Ferguson, reservations.

* * *

A card party will be held Tuesday night by Mary E. Schenley Chapter No. 180, Ladies of the Golden Eagle, following the business meeting. Mrs. Ida McCabe is general chairman and Mrs. Rebecca Berkel is social chairman.

* * *

For the benefit of the new Protestant Home for the Aged at West Liberty, a card party will be given by the Poinsettia Club Thursday night in the Central Athletic Association, Craig and Fillmore streets. Mrs. Charles M. Stauft is general chairman.

* * *

Miss Elizabeth Bradshaw is president of the Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Canice's Catholic Church, which will hold its annual pre-Lenten card party next Saturday afternoon in the school hall, Knoxville.

* * *

A pre-Lenten benefit card party will be held Monday night in the Pittsburgh Hospital by the Nurses' Alumnae Association. Miss Angela Lager and Miss Nelle Allen are hostesses.

DRAMA LEAGUE TO BROADCAST 3 PLAYS

Three radio plays will be given from Station KDKA by members of the Pittsburgh Drama League in celebration of national drama week, February 12 to 18. Tomorrow Elbert R. Moses will read his own dramatization of the life of Lincoln, on Tuesday Mrs. Chester F. Johnston's valentine play will be given, and on Friday at 10:30 p. m. the Drama League Players will present the first radio play ever written, "A Comedy of Danger," the work of Richard Hughes, a Welsh playwright.

The purpose of national drama week is to bring to the attention of a larger public the aims of the Drama League of America, which are as follows: To diffuse such information as will arouse a more serious interest in the finer possibilities of the theater; to increase the number of playgoers who enjoy drama as an art; to encourage the development of production and study of the drama in schools and colleges; and to give publicity to all worthy contributions made by local organizations to a better understanding of the arts of the theater, whether through discussion or through participation in the performance of plays.

The activities of the Pittsburgh Drama League, although they have varied from year to year, have been centered about the "Drama League Review," which is published every week during the theatrical season by Elmer Kenyon, local president. The annual amateur players' contest, registrations for which are now being received by Mrs. Lane Thompson, of Mattern avenue, has attracted players from New York, Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania to compete for the Samuel French trophy and the five cash awards which are offered for the best production of a one-act play.

* * *

"Fighting the Criminal" is the subject upon which Ferdinand Pecora, chief assistant district attorney of New York, will speak Monday night at the annual banquet of the Allegheny County League of Women Voters in McCreery's. "Court Procedure and Jury Service" will be the topic discussed by Norval R. Daugherty at the meeting of the Fourteenth Ward League, to be held Monday afternoon in the Morrowfield Hotel. Following the address members who have served on the jury will give informal talks, telling of their reaction to jury service. Also Mrs. Emily J. Bole and Mrs. Bertha M. Howard will report the cause and cure of war. On Tuesday afternoon in the American Legion rooms, the Twenty-sixth Ward League will hold its monthly meeting. For her subject that afternoon Mrs. Elizabeth B. Motz will have "The United States Supreme Court."

The Stowe Township League will meet in the Stowe High School on Tuesday evening and Mrs. Motz will speak. The monthly meeting of the Reunerdale League will be held on Wednesday afternoon and again Mrs. Motz will speak. On Thursday evening Mrs. Mary Will is to be hostess to the Thirteenth Ward League at her home in Hamilton avenue, with Mrs. Motz as the speaker.

The Edgewood League will hold a reception Thursday evening in the home of Mrs. E. W. Simpson, Willow place, Edgewood, to honor Mrs. John O. Miller, state chairman, and Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, county chairman, both of whom will speak. A musical program will be given. On Friday afternoon the Edgewood League will have its monthly meeting in the home of Mrs. W. F. Babcock, South Braddock avenue, and will hear Mrs. Motz on "The United States Court and Jury Service."

* * *

The Congress of Clubs, where new ideas seem to grow mushroom-like, has another to add to its list. The members of the extension committee are "mothering" a cook book, which is to be the product of all the Congress members, each one having been asked to contribute her favorite recipes. These are to be sent to Mrs. George J. Campbell.

The Congress has reserved a table at the League of Women Voters' banquet Monday night in McCreery's.

Tuesday's big Congress event will be the dinner which the welfare department will give at the Workshop for the Blind. The usual radio program will also take place Tuesday, the drama department sponsoring the day. Mrs. L. A. Hubach, Mrs. Neva Morris, Miss Helen Evans and Milton Hays, coached by Miss Janet Waldorf, will give a play, "Ching Ling Valentine," and Mrs. Hubach will sing.

* * *

Mrs. James F. McNaul, a vice president, of the East Liberty Woman's Club, will be in charge of a Lincoln Day program at the monthly meeting Monday in the East Liberty Y. W. C. A. MUSIC

Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and Mendelssohn Choir
SYRIA MOSQUE

PROGRAM
"The Hymn of Jesus" from the "Acts of St. John," Opus 37 ....Gustav Holst
Mr. Ernest Lunt, Conducting.
INTERMISSION.
Symphony No. 9, in D minor, Opus 125. ....Ludwig van Beethoven
I. Allegro ma non troppo un poco maestoso.
II. Scherzo: Molto vivace.
III. Adagio molto e cantabile.
IV. Choral Finale: Schiller's "Hymn to Joy."
Mr. Henri Verbrugghen, Conducting.

A full house applauded the Mendelssohn Choir and the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra at Syria Mosque last night, and never before was applause so well earned. Great credit is due Ernest Lunt for organizing his chorus so efficiently and for giving us so many important choral works. With the electrifying Henri Verbrugghen conducting, the chorus displayed more life than ever before, and we sincerely hope he will be able to join his forces with the Mendelssohn singers again to the satisfaction and credit of Pittsburgh.

Some weeks ago Damrosch buried Beethoven. Last night Verbrugghen struck the tomb with his magic baton and Beethoven lived again. The Minneapolis Orchestra is both brilliant and subtle. There is never a feeling of overpowering tone, but of extreme gentility about this orchestra; not that it ever fails in gigantic climaxes, but its contrasts are handled so deftly and transitions are so well prepared, that results are magnificent without bombast. Verbrugghen's playing of the symphony gave it a theatrical character I have never before sensed so fully. The procession, the dance, the tragedy, the frolic, and then the incisive sweep of the choral ending were in this conductor's imagination. He projected his music with unfailing dramatic instinct. The response of the choir to every suggested nuance was most praiseworthy, and the quartet of soloists, Jeannette Vreeland, Nevada Van Der Veer, Judson House and Fraser Gange sang this difficult music with better blending of tone and more assurance than any I have ever heard in the past.

Ernest Lunt conducted during the singing of Holst's Hymn of Jesus. With orchestral accompaniment the entire work became richer and its alarming dissonances more effective. The music seems to go to more primitive sources than folk music, far back to early music a step beyond pagan processions. The precision with which the chorus attacked the uneven rhythms and discordant opening phrases, its volume of good tone, and the beautiful singing of the antiphonal choruses make me suspect our Mendelssohn Choir ranks among the first in the land.

FORMER COLLEGE STAR BEATS PELTZER

PITT SWAMPS PENN STATE, 48-25

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

THAT the outright sale of Infielder Hal Rhyne to San Francisco of the Pacific Coast League, the same club from which he, along with Paul Waner, was purchased two years ago, will not affect Pittsburgh's chances in the 1928 pennant race, is the opinion of the great majority of Pirate followers.

Hal Rhyne.

While a fair sort of ball player in some respects, Rhyne never measured up fully to league requirements while with the Pirates. He lacked both speed and hitting power, and shaped up as a player who would have to hit far above .300 to make himself valuable enough to be retained on a pennant-seeking team.

Two months ago four big league clubs expressed interest in Rhyne, but evidently they finally concluded that he would not serve their purpose. Accordingly all 15 of the other clubs in the two circuits passed him up.

IT COST the Pittsburgh club something like $80,000 to get Waner and Rhyne from San Francisco at the close of the 1925 season, but though it is now found advisable to sell back half of the purchased goods the deal still stands as one of the most successful ever made by Pittsburgh or any other club, as Waner alone is worth far more than the sum originally paid for both men, as baseball values go these days.

ONE effect of Rhyne's departure that will be pleasing to the local fans is that it will mean more of a chance for Joe Cronin this year.

Except for First Baseman Joe Harris, the only other extra infielders on the Pirate list are Dick Bartell and George Gottleber. Neither Bartell nor Gottleber has the experience of Cronin, so, with everything considered, Joe seems to have the inside track for the post of first extra-infielders, and that chance may be just what he needs to become a great ball player—an opportunity to find himself and settle down.

Joe Cronin.

WHETHER the Pittsburgh Hockey Club holds forth here again next year under Odie Cleghorn or some other skipper, or is transferred elsewhere to play for a different leader, both the pilot and the owners of the franchise are likely to have considerable to do in the matter of handling holdouts.

For new contracts will be in order next fall on what is at present the Pittsburgh team. The players, with one exception—Johnny McKinnon, who is playing out a three-year contract—will terminate their pacts at the close of the present race, and will have to be signed all over again.

THAT'S where the trouble is going to come in. In fact, it may have had something to do with the fine showing made recently, as some players have a habit of hustling a little harder when the time approaches for the signing of a new agreement.

If the Pirates succeed in getting into the play-offs some of them may consider that a good argument for substantial increases in pay.

Odie Cleghorn.

Of course, there are four or five on the squad who may not be kept in the big league at all, but there are at least three others who have informed friends that they want "plenty more" next season and are determined to get it. One of them says "the owners will think I am asking for the rink when I tell them what I want.

WITH William Greenwood, of Ellis', and Robert Carter, of Kalmer's, in a close battle for first place, and three others not far behind them, interest in the Pittsburgh Three-Cushion Billiard League, playing its first season, is increasing daily.

Each week there has been an increase in the crowds and with the season little more than half over, the loop's sponsors are already enthusiastically thinking of plans for next season. For the league has so far apparently attained its objective: the furnishing of competition among the best local players and the increase of public interest in billiards, a game that for various reasons to an alarming extent has lost its appeal for the man in the street.

HARRIS AND MILJUS TO ATTEND REUNION

Members of The Veterans' Association of Headquarters Company, Three Hundred and Twentieth Infantry, with which Joe Harris and John Miljus of the Pirates served in France, will attend the annual dinner and reunion of the organization tonight in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Officers who led the company overseas will be on the speaking program.

LIONS FACE CARNEGIE QUINTET TONIGHT

By JESS CARVER.

PENN State's varsity basketball team, accounted one of the best in the East, will ramble over to the Carnegie Tech side of Panther Hollow tonight, where it will wind up its annual court invasion of Pittsburgh by playing the Tartans. Following the 48-25 shellacking administered by the undefeated Pitt Panthers last night, the Lions' morale is not of the best for the encounter before them. The defeat was not exactly unexpected, even to the State supporters, yet there were few who thought Pitt would be able to pull out ahead with any 23-point margin.

The 5,000, more or less, who saw last night's affair in the Stadium were not particularly impressed with the basketball played by either team. Neither were they impressed with the way the game was handled. There were 33 fouls called in the game, which is about 15 more than teams of the caliber of either State or Pitt should draw. Dutch Hermann doesn't develop teams that commit 20—20, count 'em—fouls in one ball game.

In a rip-snorting preliminary, that was garnished by a near fist fight at the closing whistle, the Panther Cubs defeated the Lion frosh quintet by a 30-28 score, coming from behind twice to pull in the victory. The varsity game lineup:

Pitt—48.		Penn State—25.
Zehfuss	F	Reinhold
Hyatt	F	Lungren
Wunderlich	C	Reilly
Reed (C)	G	(C) Von Neida
Wrobleski	G	Delp

Score by periods:

Pitt	21	27—48
Penn State	11	14—25

Substitutions—Pitt: Cohen for Hyatt, Hyatt for Cohen, Sandburg for Hyatt, Fisher for Reed, McMahon for Wunderlich. Penn State: Hamas for Reinhold, Jacobsen for Hamas, Wilson for Lungren.

GAMES TONIGHT

Montreal at Pittsburgh

Boston at Canadiens

N. Y. Americans at Toronto

By CARL W. SHATTO.

BOO! B-o-o-o! B-o-o-o-oo!! Get Stewart! Get Seibert, Dutton and Munro! Oh, those big bums! Kill 'em! B-o-o-o!!

While this hammer and anvil chorus beats unceasingly on organs supported by the hammer, anvil and stirrup, the ice Pirates, orphans of the National Hockey League, will batter unceasingly at the stubborn defense of the Montreal Maroons at Duquesne Garden tonight in an effort to extend a comeback record that has made them the sensation of the hockey world.

Boo! B-o-o-o!—that's the reverse-English cheering that has come to be synonymous with Pittsburgh-Montreal ice battles. Boo! B-o-o-o! —that's the way local fans voice a somewhat mysterious but wholehearted hatred for a worthy, dangerous foe.

MAROONS DANGEROUS

And what an uproar there will be if Montreal should win! If booing of amazing proportions was Montreal's reward for trying to upset the Pirates when the locals were downtrodden and going nowhere (as was the case in early-season tilts) what will be the Maroon's reward for trying to flatten the Pirates when they are attempting to extend a four-game victory string, and when they are within three points of a play-off berth?

The answer may be of some concern to everyone except the Maroons. Right now the invaders are only one victory away from a money position, and if they are able to garner those two points while here they will not lose any sleep over the wholesale vocal condemnation they are certain to receive from local fandom.

Awakened by the Bucs' climb from the bottom to the top, and by the prospect of the club's being lost to the city, local fans will make the crowd one of capacity proportions. Wishing to avoid the confusion attendant to a last-minute rush, the Garden management has arranged to throw open the doors at 7 o'clock.

Canzoneri Defeats Bass For Title

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Tony Canzoneri assumed undisputed recognition as featherweight champion of the world today, but only after a fierce 15-round struggle with Benny Bass of Philadelphia, who boxed most of the distance with a dislocated right shoulder.

Before a crowd of about 14,000 in Madison Square Garden last night, Canzoneri opened up with a rapid-fire fusillade of rights to the head which nearly knocked out Bass in the third round. The Philadelphia boxer went down for a count of eight and was on his knee when the bell ended the round.

Tony Canzoneri.

The injury to Bass was not disclosed until after the bout when a large swelling appeared about the shoulder. Dr. W. G. Fralick said the shoulder was dislocated and the right collarbone possibly fractured. Bass was taken to a hospital.

Canzoneri piled up a big lead in the first 10 rounds, but saw it slip toward the finish, when Bass, rallying, drove him to cover with a hard body attack.

SOCCER NEWS by TOM BIRKS

ONLY one soccer game will be played today and will be staged at Swissvale, the Pittsburgh Soccer Club meeting the Switch boys in a game for the Toman fund.

The game has all the earmarks of being worth while attending, as quite a number of local stars, including Mike Bookie, are included in the Pittsburgh lineup for this game. The contest will be played at the Church street grounds and will start at 3 p. m.

This evening all soccerdom will turn to the Hotel Henry, where the charges of mismanagement against local soccer officials will be aired. According to the lengthy letters received in the office during the week, apparently plenty of charges are going to be brought. Close followers of the sport are hoping that tonight's session will end the bitter controversy that has raged during the past three months, and that from tonight until the season's end harmony will reign.

Tomorrow the National amateur cup committee will convene at Cleveland and with Heidelberg, Swissvale, Harmarville and McPherson still interested locally plenty of fans will be awaiting the result of the draw.

ROTH CHOSEN PILOT OF JOHNSTOWN CLUB

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 10.—Bebe Roth, first baseman of the Johnstown, Middle Atlantic League, baseball club the past two seasons today was elected manager for the coming season. Directors of the club held their annual meeting.

NATIONAL PIN MEET CARDED FOR CITY

PITTSBURGH, long acknowledged the home of duckpin bowlers, has been accorded the honor of holding the first annual tournament of the American Duckin Congress, recently-formed governing body for the small pin rollers, and similar to the A. B. C., the parent body of tenpin bowlers, according to word received from the congress' secretary, George B. Wessa. Duckpinsters from all over the country will convene here from April 9 to 21 at the Haus Recreation Parlors, Federal street.

The board of directors of the congress decided it would not be wise to go to the expense of installing new equipment of their own. Sealed bids were asked of the largest bowling centers in the city and the contract awarded the lowest bidders, the Haus Recreation Parlors, Inc.

The first tourney of the A. D. C., formed here last year, is expected to be bigger and better than any other duckpin event that ever has been held anywhere. There are to be classes for five-men teams, two-men teams and individual events, and the same for women. The all-star events high scorer will receive an appropriately engraved solid gold medal with the customary prize money.

Numerous leagues in this and surrounding cities already have signified their intention of entering teams in the classic and the management of the Haus Recreation Parlors, have guaranteed a team from every league that bowls on its alleys. There are more than 50 such loops rolling there at the present time.

As has been the case in the other tournaments held in this section that have been the greatest successes, the entry fee will be the nominal sum of $2 per entrant for each event. Entries will close at midnight, March 24.

Arrangements will be made for out-of-town teams to roll at special times and they are requested to get in touch with the congress' secretary at his headquarters, 922 Fulton Building, telephone Grant 5463.

BASEBALL BRIEFS

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—(INS.)—Butch Henline, Brooklyn catcher, may be traded to the Boston Braves, according to a rumor in circulation here today. The Braves need a catcher badly and Brooklyn's other two receivers, Charley Hargreaves and Hank DeBerry, have signed 1928 contracts.

Ten Robins have not yet flown into the fold. They include Riconda and Bissonette, infielders, and Statz and Tyson, outfielders.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—(INS.)—Inasmuch as he represents half of what the New York Giants received from Boston in exchange for Rogers Hornsby, their $120,000 beauty, Catcher Frank Hogan thinks the Giants should pay him more money than he got from the Braves last season. He will discuss the salary question today at a conference with Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the Giants.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 11.—Bruce Caldwell, Yale football star, has denied reports that he had agreed to join the New York Yankees when he is graduated.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—George Sisler, star first baseman and former kingpin slugger of the American League, was en route today to the Tampa, Fla., spring training camp of the Washington Senators. Sisler left yesterday for the East after spending the winter at Laguna Beach, near here.

"I am in the best condition I have been in for some years, and I'm due to have a big year with the Senators," Sisler said.

RAY CONGER OUTSTEPS GERMAN FLYER

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—The fame of Dr. Otto Peltzer, German middle distance runner, was in eclipse today to a lean lanky Iowan by the name of Ray Conger.

Conger, national A. A. U. champion outdoor miler and a former prominent track man at the University of Iowa, showed his heels to the highly-touted German runner in the 1,000-meter race at the Riding Club games here last night.

Conger breasted the tape a full nine yards ahead of Peltzer. Ray's time for the distance was 2:37 1-5, not a record.

Running in the same event were Ray Dodge and Leo Larrivee. They finished in this order: Conger, Peltzer, Dodge and Larrivee.

The hope of track enthusiasts for a mile race between Lloyd Hahn and Peltzer will be realized on February 25. Following his defeat by Conger, Peltzer announced he had received permission and had accepted an invitation to compete against Hahn in the mile run at the Knights of Columbus games at New York on that date.

TOMMY ARMOUR ON GOLF By Tommy Armour U.S. and Canadian Open Champion

ONE sees and hears a great deal written and spoken about the importance of timing in the golf stroke, but I am pretty sure that a great many of those who play golf have but little conception of just what is meant by timing. Briefly, timing means making the clubhead attain its maximum speed just as it reaches the ball. But it should also be added that this maximum speed ought to be the climax of a gradually increasing pace that starts slowly and picks up uniformly from the start of the downswing until the ball is hit.

To acquire perfect timing one must bring about a perfect co-ordination of the movement of the arms with that of the body, and likewise must introduce the forward snap of the clubhead as it comes to the ball, through a wrist and forearm action at just the right time.

THERE are two common considerations that do more than all else to spoil the timing of the stroke. The first is starting to turn the body too rapidly as the downswing begins. The second is putting in the wrist action too soon. In short, the two amount to hitting too soon. You never see a player hit too late. By that I mean it is practically impossible for the player to swing the arms around too fast for the body. The trouble is almost always on the other side of the ledger.

And here is why this is true. The seat of the real hitting power is the big muscles of the body, shoulders and legs. And when the player, either from being over anxious or from aiming at hitting too hard, sends out a mental flash to these muscles, they go at once into action, with the result that the body starts turning too fast for the arms, and these lag behind and are unable to catch up.

TWO UPSETS RECORDED IN SCHOOL RACES

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

Two big upsets, the defeat of South Hills and Fifth Avenue High Schools, marked yesterday's games in the City Senior League. Allegheny put it over on South Hills, 29 to 20, in Section 2, thereby causing a deadlock and an almost certain playoff for division honors, while in Section 1 Westinghouse came along and barely nosed out Fifth Avenue, 21 to 20, thereby eliminating the lone undefeated team of the circuit and causing a tie for leadership with Schenley.

Schenley must meet Fifth Avenue once more this season, and, while it lost its last encounter with the Downtowners in a startling upset, the Bellefielders are expected to advance through to meet the victor of Section 2 in the titular elimination series.

Schenley set down South easily, 40 to 12, and Perry belittled Langley, 44 to 17, in other games.

GROVE CITY VARSITY TOPS WASH.-JEFF. 26-21

GROVE CITY, Pa., Feb. 11.—Grove City defeated Washington and Jefferson on the local basketball court here last night 26-21 in a closely-fought game featured by the close guarding of both teams. Bob Thorn, starting with a revamped lineup and making frequent changes during the game, put a team on the floor which outscored Wash-Jeff in the last half to win by a 5-point margin.

Grove City took the lead early in the second period and held it throughout the closing minutes with both teams fighting for possession of the ball.

Valentine Ideals and Romance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

STOP, look and listen! all you who are interested in romance! And who of us is not, either frankly or secretly, sentimental? Next Tuesday is St. Valentines!

Can you afford to miss such an opportunity for a jolly celebration, for affectionate remembrances and sentimental day dreams!

Little did either of the two Christian martyrs named Valentine, who sacrificed their lives the same day, more than 1,500 years ago, dream that the festival dedicated to them, celebrated on February 14 by the early church, would in time become identified with young lovers and their efforts to choose a fitting life-mate!

* * *

TODAY, the holiday dedicated to St. Valentine, still flourishes. Valentine parties are especially enjoyable because they have an atmosphere and character peculiarly their own, which makes them a little "different" and unique. Besides, heart-interest is a bond which draws folks together unfailingly. So next Tuesday will be a fitting time to invite a few of your friends to dine, dance or play Valentine games.

Fortune-telling games are always in order at a party which plots to help Cupid. At a certain Valentine dinner-party a year ago, the hostess saw to it that her guests were congenially paired off, according to place-cards at the dinner table consisting of blushing pasteboard hearts, each inscribed with an appropriate sentimental verse. Attached to each place-card was a red satin ribbon leading to the center of the great white frosted cake which adorned the center of the table. At desert, all the ribbons were pulled in unison, and each guest drew a favor from what was not a cake after all, but a card-board box!

Elsie drew a tiny pocket pencil, emblem of her ambition to succeed as a writer. Her Dick won a tiny miniature of a lady resembling Elsie, omen of success in his persistent efforts to win Elsie, career or no career!

To Mary was alloted a wedding ring. This led naturally to a heart-to-heart talk with shy Bob on their way home. Sure enough, Mary is wearing a real wedding ring this year!

* * *

WISE mating is the most important event in the life of the average woman and man. For this reason, every holiday that serves to bring young folks together in merry let romantic mood, enabling them to know and understand each other better, is of supreme importance to one and all.

You will find that advanced modern thinkers indorse the sentimental holidays. Why pretend we are not emotional. Sentiment is as dear to the normal human being as life-blood itself. Who has not loved, has not lived. And it is sentiment, ideals of love, which make marriage the most precious, best-loved, most enduring of all human institutions.

A cold-blooded, worldly match is as fatal to real happiness as is a hastily considered, cheap elopement, result of quick infatuation.

"The plain fact about marriage," writes H. L. Mencken, "is that it is a magnificent sentimentality or it is nothing. It satisfies the yearning for intimate and unbroken companionship which is normal to the human race."

The spirit of St. Valentine's, like the spirit of true love, is not degrading self-indulgence — the necking party or the hip flask. It is the jolly, yet wholesome spirit of romance and idealistic love.

* * *

SO DO not hesitate to send your sweetheart a valentine. If it is carefully chosen, it will express your regard for her, so unerringly that she should be able to guess the sender even though modesty may prompt you to send it anonymously in true St. Valentine style. And while she may jest about it, I venture to guess she will prize her valentine, especially if it is adorned with gilt and white paper lace, sugary sentiments, pink roses, blushing, united hearts pierced by Cupid's bow and Cupid's own bewinged and chubby form.

A merry St. Valentine's Day to you! May the sweetest valentine you ever received reach you next Tuesday, from the one you love best of all!

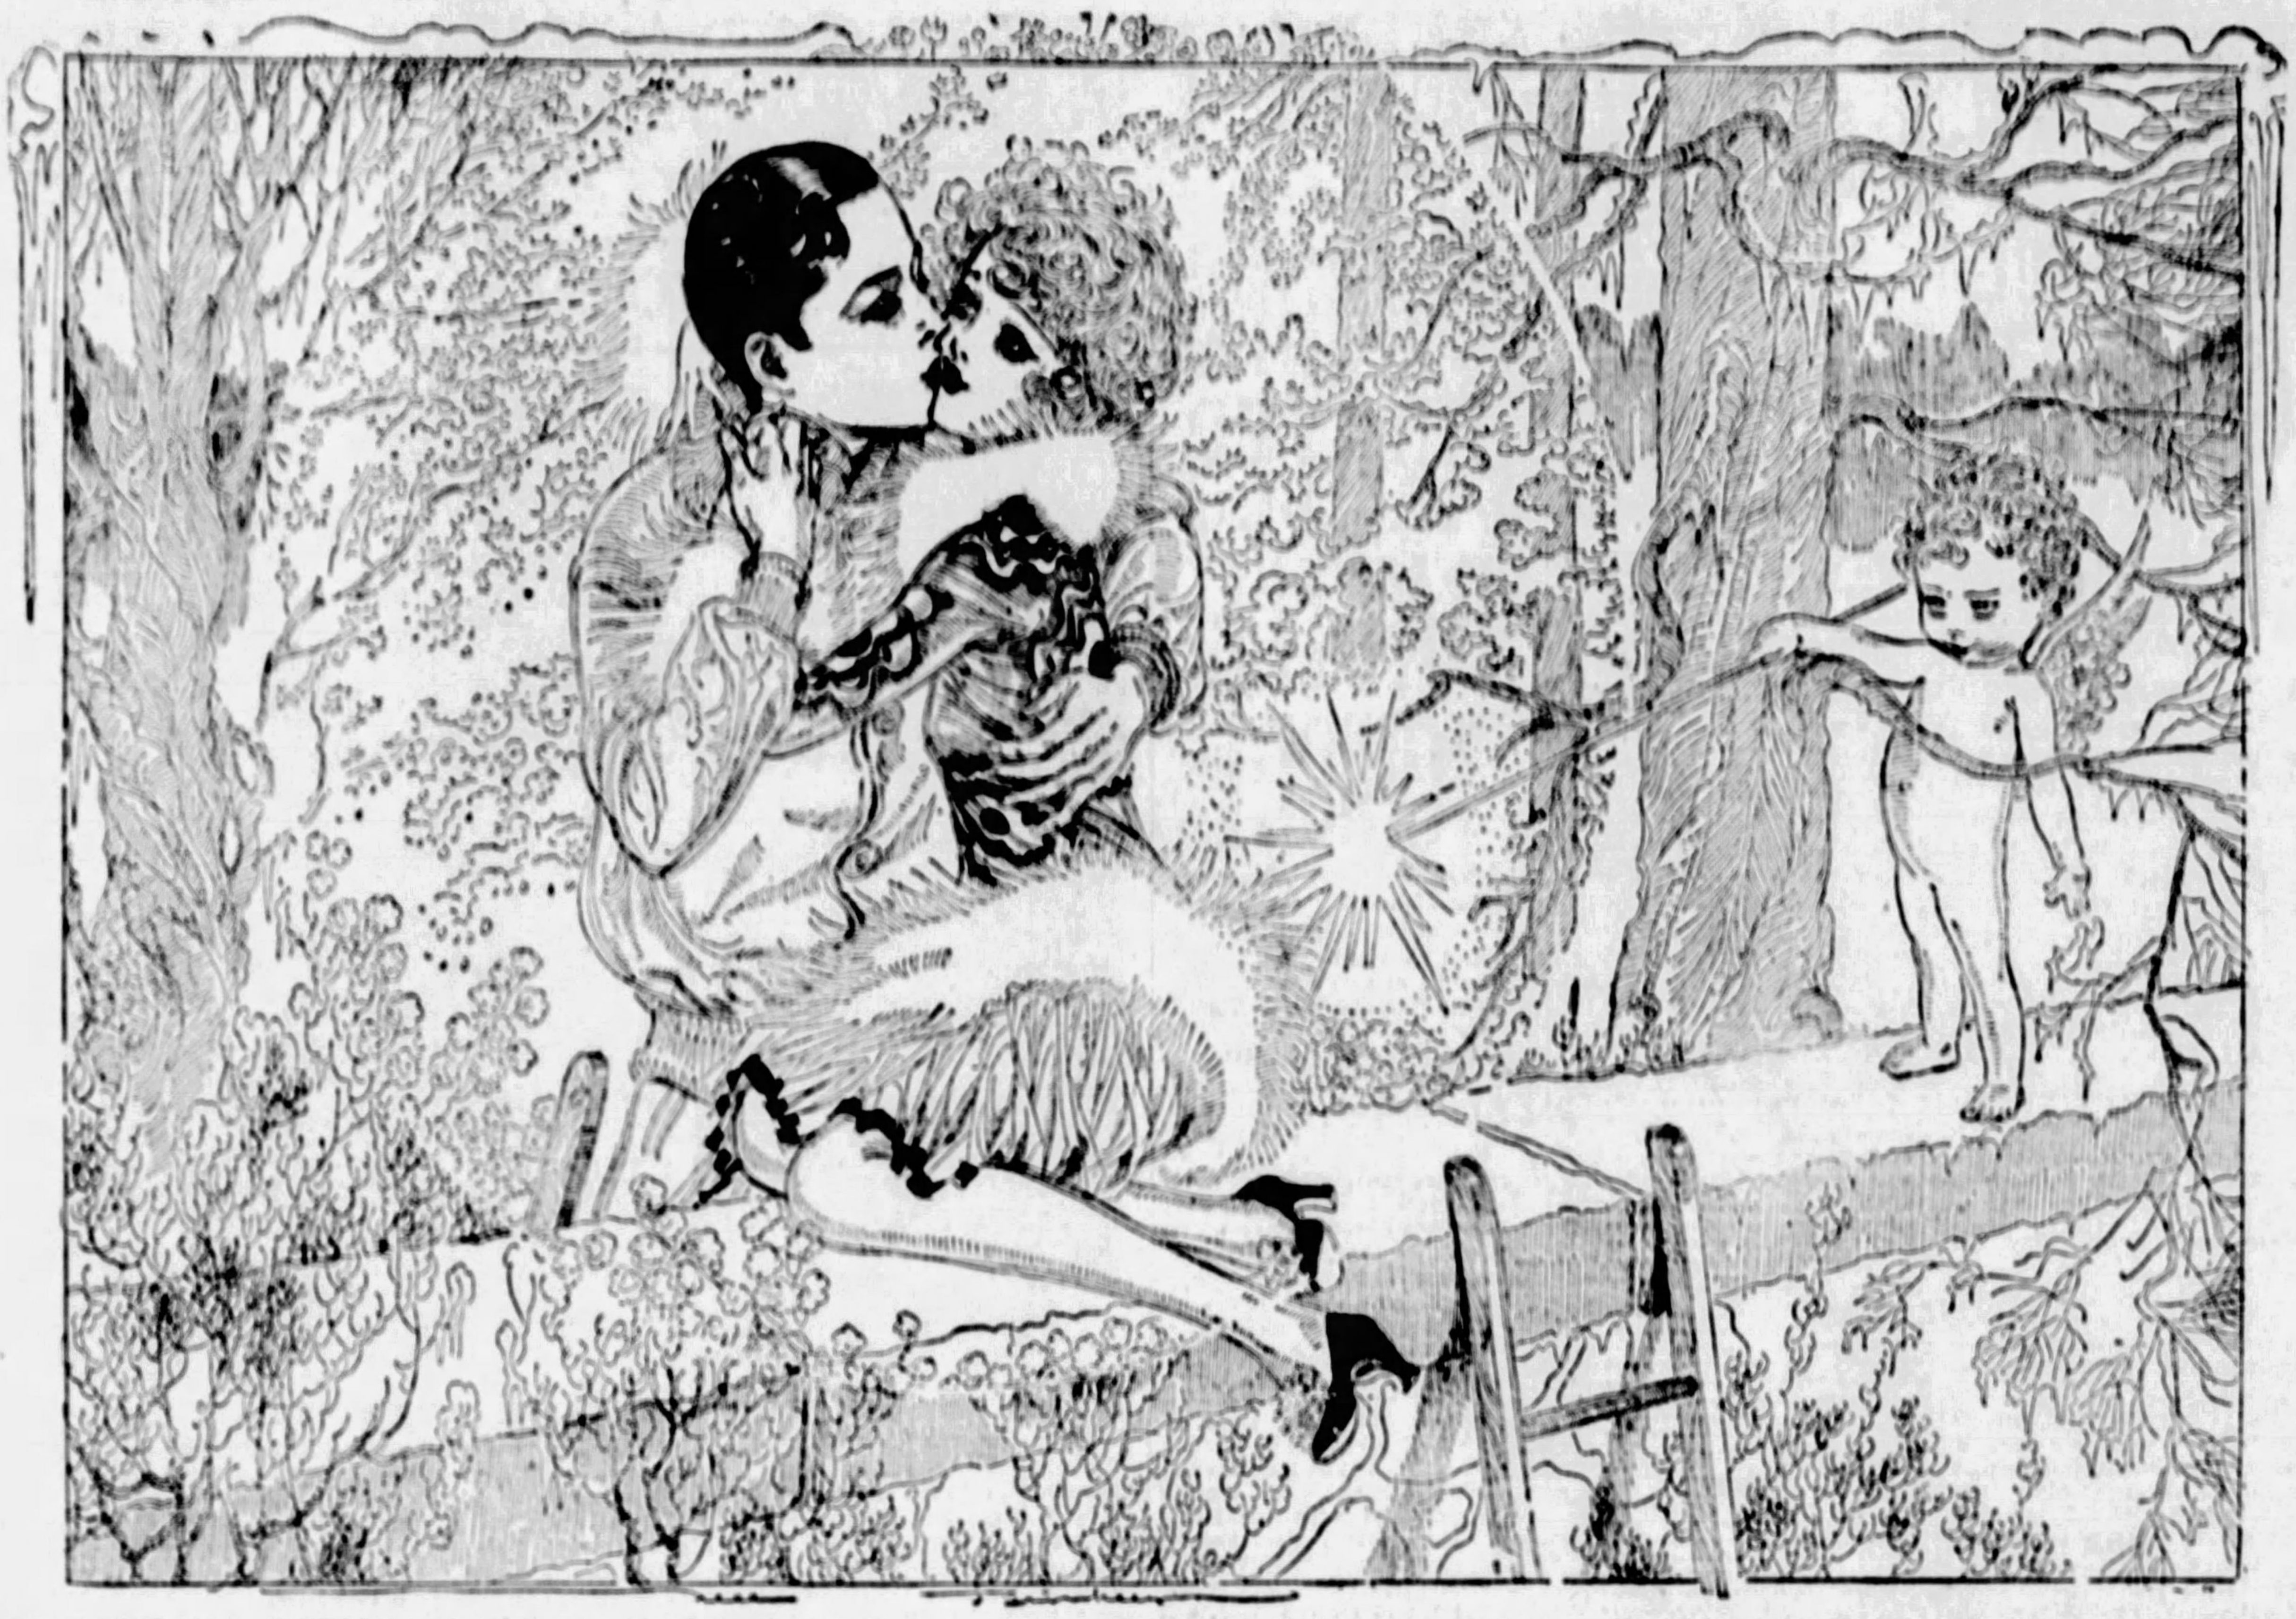
A MIRACLE -:- -:- -:-

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY



HERE Summer lingers in Winter's icy arms! An iron landscape, with the bare, blue-black branches of trees, frozen ground, chilly sky and bitter wind, keeping it one cold, gray tone. And in the midst of this Arctic scenery is an isle of Summer. Faerys draw magic circles wherein Trouble cannot step his rundown shoe. Cupid belongs to the race of immortals. Even if he isn't exactly a faery, he's relation. He's kin. And he can make a magic circle, too. Like an unearthly ring of rosy light spotlighted on a gray setting. And where the bare branches of the trees stretch their tips into this rainbow circle it is Summer for them; their leaves grow green; here flowers nod and warm air dreams.

For over the Winter-frosted wall Romeo and Juliet are meeting, and, though he wears a wind-break and she wool and fur, and the birds in the garden say it is a mighty cold day in the heart of Winter, the little isle where they are is all sunshine and flowers and fragrant Summer air.

Real Love can keep polar winds at bay; in other words, he can make two lovers very comfortable on a bare stone wall in the Winter-time; he can make two lovers happy, divinely happy, on what is only enough for one or a half of a one! But it's got to be real Love himself. And persons who ought to know say that there are quite a few impersonators of Love going around trying to act natural and take in the boys and girls. His gilt rubs off, however, if you will take the time to try it before you are wound up in his "wib," as my baby says! —NELL BRINKLEY.

Why Not Avoid Disease, Rather Than Treat It?

IN ONE of his orations Cicero said, "In nothing do men approach more near the gods than in giving health to men."

DR. COPELAND

I can conceive of no higher ambition in life than attempting to improve the health and vigor of the human race. Every time a new food goes on the market, every time a new form of exercise is devised, every time a physician gives advice to his patients, the human family is being benefited, and heaven smiles in consequence.

I am sure the amount of illness in the world will decrease materially when good health becomes a sort of religion. Personally, I think it is wicked to neglect the body and deliberately to do things which will cause illness. It is not alone on the positive side that wickedness comes. It is equally wicked to neglect to do the things which will make for good health.

When it comes to eating, many persons are just as haphazard, careless and indifferent as they can be. They seem to apply themselves to the problem of life just about as successfully as the absent-minded professor of whom I have heard.

Christmas was approaching, and he went out to make his purchases. Apparently he did keep in mind that Christmas is a holiday, but to the horror of his family when they opened his gifts on Christmas, they found an Easter lily, a package of April fool candy, and a bunch of fire crackers!

Lots of people are just as absent-minded regarding the things they take into their stomachs. Along with good food they take indigestible things and unneeded things, and entirely inappropriate things.

Every parent should be so well informed regarding the essentials of health that the child will be receiving sensible instruction every day. Not alone in the home should this be the case, but in the school room. Right living should be one of the important subjects for study. The parent and the teacher have an opportunity to approach the gods by teaching health to the child.

The press has a wonderful opportunity. In these days the radio is being used for this purpose.

We are approaching the time when instruction will be so general, so universally received, that there can be no possible excuse for doing the things which are now done throughtlessly and ignorantly. I look forward with pleasure to the time when doctors won't be needed except as a part of the teaching equipment of the community. The ideal state would be one where the only medical attention needed would be in the efforts made to avoid disease, rather than to treat it.

I trust that you will be inspired to obtain all the accurate health knowledge possible. Apply it in your own living and pass it on to your family and friends. We should make good health contagious, just as disease is contagious today.

To Develop Beauty of The Ankles

By MARIA JERITZA

A GLIMPSE of a lady's ankle, displayed perhaps indiscreetly, amid the excitement of a croquet game, was sufficient cause for masculine thrills in the mauve decade. Legs were, of course, unmentionable! In these days of frankly pretty feet and ankles, only a clumsy ankle is conspicuous, and revealed knees are taken for granted.

No one need have clumsy ankles. Unless fate has given you very large ankle bones, you can slenderize your feet and ankles to the point of symmetry and trimness. Even though slenderness should not speedily reward your reducing efforts, you can dress and manage your ankles in such a way that their size will not be noticeable.

The woman with large ankles is usually large throughout her body. Reduction of the amount of fattening food she eats will in time bring about desired results in slenderizing her entire body, including her ankles.

YOU may say that you eat very little and still are stout. But the fact remains that in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred size is in direct ratio to the amount of fattening food eaten, plus the amount of exercise taken. It may be that you eat lightly at meal times, then nibble at chocolates, ice cream sundaes, cakes and other delicacies between meals.

If you are in earnest in your desire for pretty ankles, you will cheerfully forego white bread, potatoes and fats for the next six months and will cut down your supply of sweets to one simple dessert each day, with nothing between meals. Fortunately, after the first few days this reducing regime is likely to become second nature and will not seem a sacrifice. When you are simply dying for a soda or candy, console yourself with a glass of water or fresh fruit juice. You cannot drink too much water.

* * *

DO NOT wear rundown heels, for they weaken the ankles and make feet and ankles awkward. If your ankles are thick, never wear a narrow or very high heel, for it will make your feet look dangerously and conspicuously overbalanced.

Avoid tight straps and elaborate embroidery on your evening slippers, for they will attract attention to your ankles. A simple opera pump with moderate heels and possibly a small rhinestone bow should prove most becoming to a woman with large ankles.

For street wear, low-cut Oxfords, with moderate or low heels and V-heeled stockings, will add slender length to your feet and ankles.

FRIEND TAKEN OUT OF SCHOOL

By Universal Service.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 11.—Maj. Stanley Washburn, financier, yesterday withdrew his daughter, Fawan Washburn, from Smith College. Fawan, 17, is a classmate and a friend of Frances St. John Smith, missing freshman. Maj. Washburn, who lives in Lakewood and stays at the University Club when in New York, is a close friend of St. John Smith, father of Frances.

President William Allen Neilson announced Washburn "gave several reasons for withdrawing his daughter."

Miss Washburn's withdrawal was the third in less than two weeks. The first was that of Lisettie Personius of Elmira, a freshman living in Dewey House, home of Frances Smith. She was taken out by her mother, Mrs. H. W. Personius. The second was Beatrice Ross Oenslager of Harrisburg, Pa., daughter of Mrs. John Oenslager. She was a senior.

Authorities are trying to trace the writer of a letter who compared Miss Smith's disappearance to the Leopold-Loeb murder and referred to the former as "the perfect crime."

Borah's Dry Quiz Is Flooring 1928 Hopefuls—Will

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 11.—My good friend, Bill Borah, makes life miserable for these presidential candidates. Every time a new one shies his helmet into what he hopes will be the presidential ring, why Borah floors him with the question, "How do you stand on the prohibition question?" And the poor fellow, not knowing which side the most votes are on, is stuck before he starts.

Will Rogers.

There are men bareheaded in this race now that will be sunstruck before even the heat of Kansas City and Houston hits 'em.

Yours with a hat on.
WILL ROGERS.

Wheeler Cancels Visit

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, telegraphed to Justice of the Peace J. M. O'Rourke, of Curry, last night that he would be unable to come here today, as he had planned, to investigate the 12 criminal charges made against O'Rourke by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation.

The justice is accused of conspiracy, aggravated assault and battery and pointing firearms in connection with the recent shooting at Curry. He has waived preliminary hearings and posted $8,300 bail pending action by the grand jury.

Senator Wheeler visited Curry and Bruceton a week ago and conferred with Squire O'Rourke. On being informed of the charges against the justice the Senator characterized them as "outrageous."

Squire O'Rourke was invited to go to Washington to testify concerning the charges against him before a senatorial committee of investigation.

RUTH IS FORCED DOWN IN STORM

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Ruth Elder, who knows what it means to make a forced landing in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean and live to tell about it, has had another narrow escape from death or serious injury.

A Stinson-Detroiter six-passenger plane, piloted by Eddie Stinson, Detroit aviator, and carrying four passengers, including Miss Elder, was forced down on a farm near here late yesterday after a three-hour battle with clouds and heavy fog. The plane was en route to Detroit from Chicago with a party of Detroiters. The plane earlier in the day had gone to Chicago to meet Miss Elder, who was returning from the Pacific coast.

After taking Miss Elder aboard, the plane reached Detroit in the fast time of an hour and 40 minutes, but as Stinson brought the machine to a lower altitude the heavy fog caused ice to form on the wings. He was unable to land at the Detroit flying field without risking a crash. Stinson elevated the plane again and for three hours barely managed to keep the plane upright while attempting to find a landing place. The plane was finally landed without mishap near Hartford City, many miles from its destination.

FLY TO DETROIT

FORD AIRPORT, DEARBORN, Mich., Feb. 11.—(INS.)—Ruth Elder and her party of four landed safely at the airport at 10:35, Eastern Standard time, today in the Stinson-Detroiter monoplane piloted by Eddie Stinson, famous World War aviator.

Miss Elder and her companions hopped off from Hartford City, Ind., this morning, where they were forced to land yesterday by a heavy fog.

POLICEMAN IS PAROLED

Patrolman Joseph Zuby, convicted Thursday of aggravated assault and battery, was paroled for one year by Visiting Judge J. N. Langham of Indiana county and ordered to pay $900 to the victim of his assault. He was accused by William Macvittie, Troy Hill, of brutally beating him on the head, face and body with a mace.

Zuby declared that Macvittie resisted arrest.

MISS NEW ZEALAND

Hollywood's latest—Dale Austen, "Miss New Zealand," winner of a screen contest in New Zealand and Australia, recently arrived in Hollywood to embark on a motion picture career with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

'LINDY' ADDED TO COUNTY PARK

The newest arrival at the county's South Park is "Lindy," dotted fawn of nine months.

"Lindy" was born on the day his aeronautical namesake flew to Paris, and was deserted by his mother on the same day, in the woods of Laughlintown, Westmoreland county.

W. S. Wright, state game protector, found him and carried him to the Phillips Game Refuge, where the superintendent, W. W. Stewart, placed him in the care of the Stewart children, Jane 11, and Billie, 7.

Jane and Billie reared "Lindy" zealously. They taught him to drink from a baby's milk bottle and to lift a hoof and shake hands with welcome visitors.

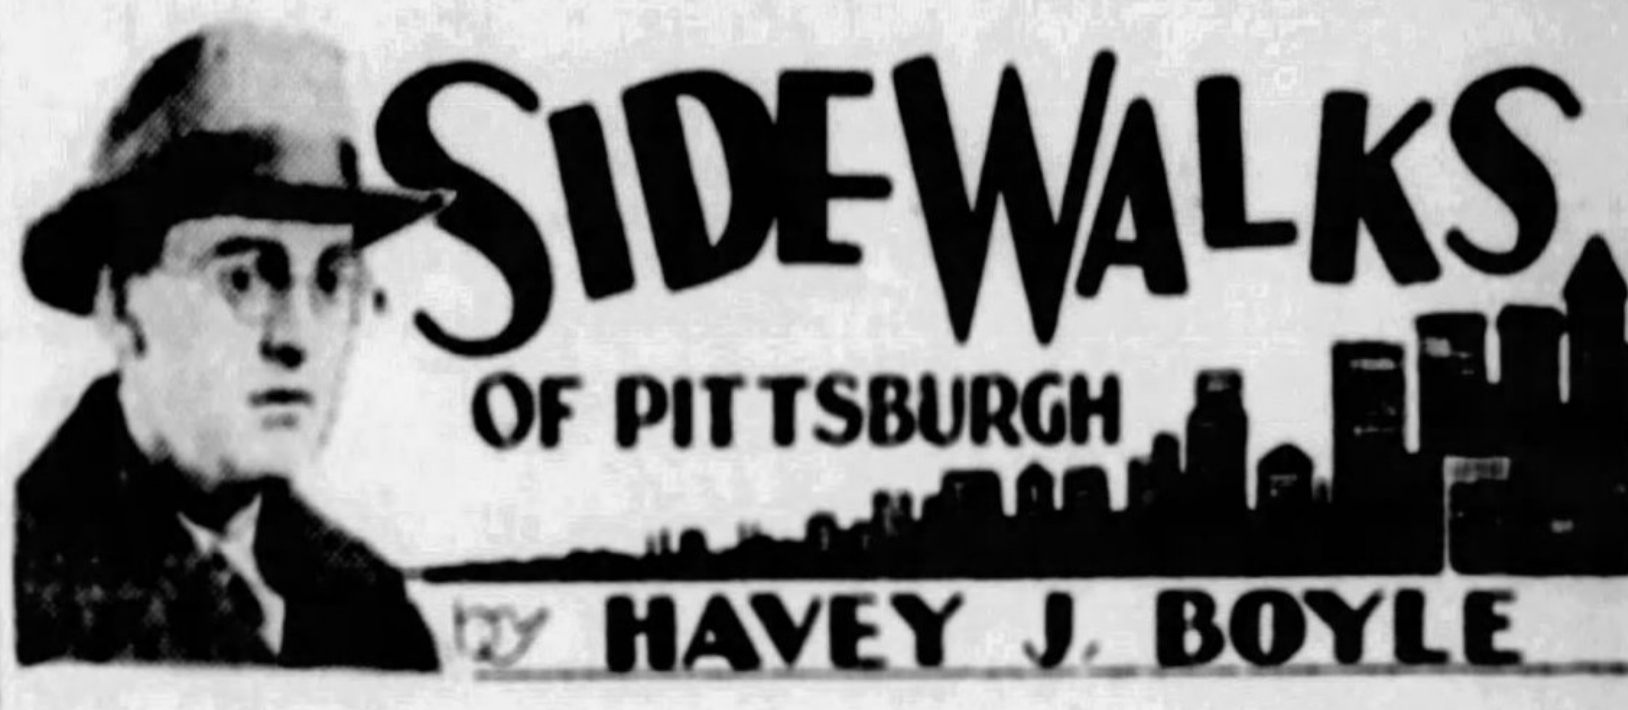
Frank B. Ollett, Bridgeville coal operator, told County Commissioner E. V. Babcock about "Lindy." And now "Lindy" is in the wide spaces of South Park. Jane and Billie Stewart argued against this change of scenery, but agreed finally when they were promised that they might visit "Lindy" often.

GROCER, ALONE, IS ROBBED

An armed robber obtained $150 yesterday in the holdup of Nathan Marsh, proprietor of a grocery store at 1519 Brighton road, North Side. The robber entered when Marsh was alone in the store and demanded the contents of the cash register.

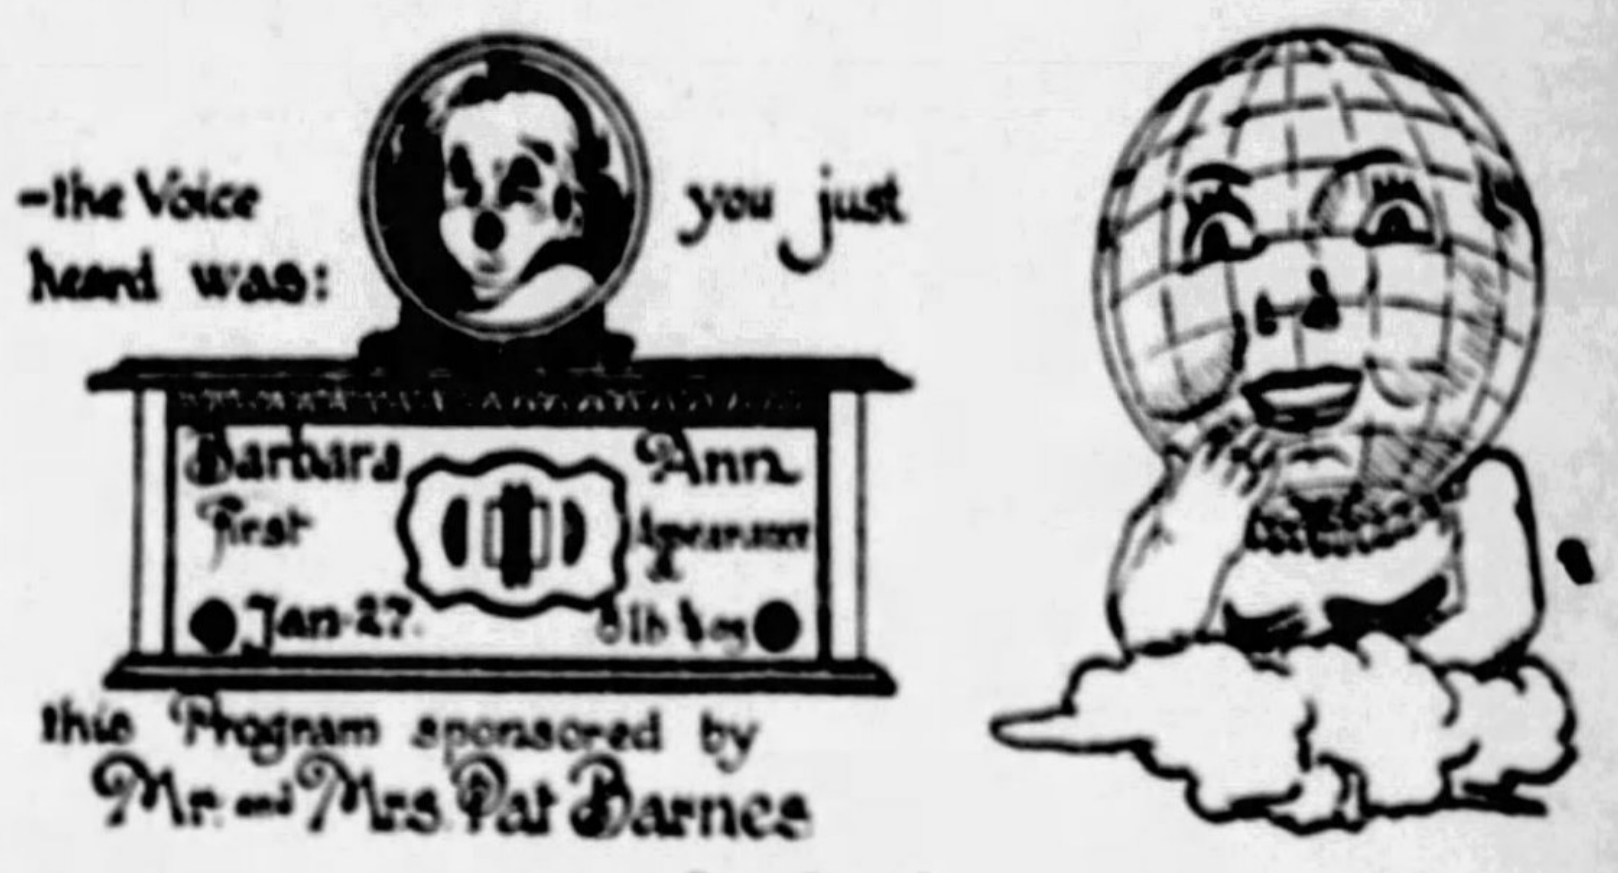
STAGE HOLDUP FOR NOTHING

Held up by two armed bandits in Stanton avenue, near Holmes street last night, Joseph Sipper, of 819 McCandless avenue, was permitted to go unmolested when a search of his pockets revealed no money. Police of the Forty-third street station were notified and given descriptions of the holdup men.



ONE of the best radio announcers in the country is Pat Barnes, a tall young gentleman who easily could pass for John Barrymore. He hails from Sharon, Pa., and after having done some theatricals in Pittsburgh and other places, drifted to Chicago where he took up the art of radio announcing. You can hear him three nights a week on WHT, Chicago, which is quite close to KDKA on our set, and presumably about the same position on yours.

The stork recently deposited a soft little bundle in the Barnes' menage and below is the card that Mr. Barnes is broadcasting to his friends.

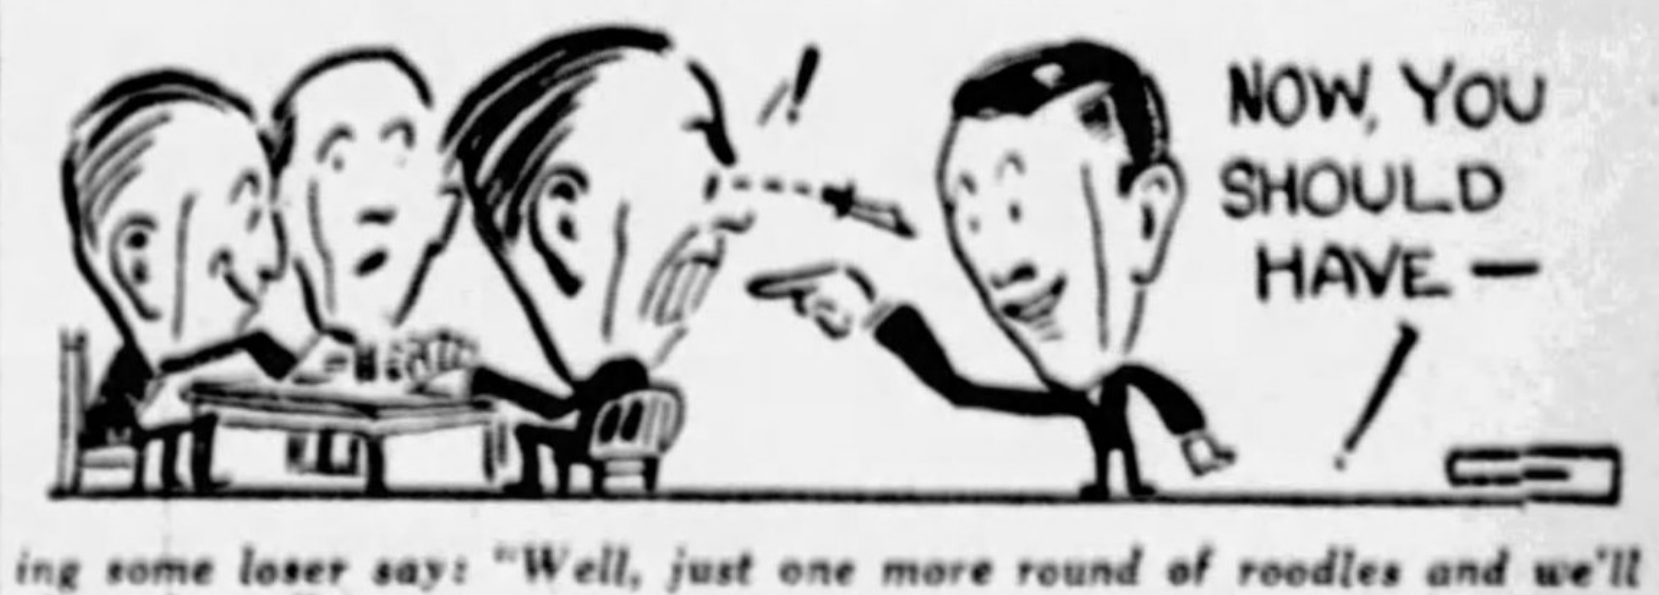


* * *

ONE never speaks of radio unless one thinks of Percy Boyd, genial radio impressario for the Westinghouse interests. He is one of the pioneers of the pioneering broadcasting station of the world. We remember when he first started coming around newspaper offices speaking of this radio thingamajig which sounded to some of us like a lot of boloney, which is the slang word for hooey. Percy has been at the same work ever since and is more enthusiastic now about radios than he ever has been. You probably have seen him on the street often, but never recognized him. He wears a hard hat, tortoise shell glasses and a blue suit.

* * *

AT A party the other night we noticed men still play poker. They probably have never heard of bridge—that must be the only solution. As a veteran of both games we believe poker to be inferior. Besides, one can quit a bridge game at a respectable hour without having some loser say: "Well, just one more round of roodles and we'll all go home."



NOW, YOU SHOULD HAVE—

Pinochle is almost as good as bridge but pinochle attracts too many kibitzers. Kibitzers are the fellows who stand behind your chair and after the hand is all over tell you how many mistakes you made. They are the world's greatest second guessers and experts without portfolio.

* * *

AS AN old observer of things theatrical here and elsewhere it always has seemed a puzzle why Pittsburgh theater managers do not first arrange a false opening for all plays and musical shows. This part would produce nothing but a little time for the ladies in the audience to drop (a) their program; (b) their hat; (c) their handkerchief; (d) their pocketbook, and (e) all those other articles which ladies drop in theaters. After their escorts pick up all these things a general signal should be flashed to the stage manager: "Now let the play go on." The present custom of dropping all these things in the course of the first act robs Thespis of some attraction.

THE postmaster in the Oakland station has one of the hardest jobs in the county. There are some 15,000 college students who do most of their mailing from that section. He handles letters with the stamps in strange places (a part of the stamp love code); he handles the washing of a few thousand students who send their clothes back home for the Monday ablutions; and he must watch that the awaited check from the students' home is not delayed one moment. On the whole he reports he likes serving his large family in Oakland.

* * *

OAKLAND is the only section in Pittsburgh that breathes deeply of the collegiate atmosphere. In that section one notes raincoats with Greek designs on their backs, when pictures or slogans are not printed on them.

It is in that section that the future artists and professional men put in their freshmen, sophomoric days awaiting the time when they will do something big in the world.

No class, it seems here, achieves that rare insight needed to see itself as others see it, as the collegians. Their humor as exemplified in the college magazines is the freshest, most penetrating, and rowdiest of any humor on the boards.

Pat Sends a Trunk With All Her Things To Lilly

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

LILLY LEXINGTON, spoiled daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, is engaged to marry STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. She is fond of him, but realizes she does not really love him the day after she accepts him, when she becomes instantly and violently infatuated with a taxicab driver whom she sees down town when she goes to meet her chum, SUE CAIN. Forgetting all about Sue, she jumps into his cab and he drives her home. She learns that his name is PAT FRANCE and that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY JETTERSON. She marries Pat. Lily tried, and their domestic ship sailed smoother for a few months. One day Lily met SUE CAIN, an old friend, on the street. Sue invited her to a card party. Lily, without funds, went to a store and tried to charge some clothes to her father. She was informed her mother had left word that "Mrs. Patrick France could not charge things to Mr. Lexington." Drummond pays all her bills, she leaves Pat and goes back to her old friends at home. She takes up her old life but still is not satisfied.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

THE first thing she saw was a big green glass bottle of bath salts on the very top of the cheap clothes that were packed within in neat piles. And tucked into corners were all the other toilet things that Staley Drummond had given her—the perfumes, the brushes, the kit of manicuring scissors and files, the jars of powder.

"He's sent back everything that could remind him of me," Lily said to herself.

That was exactly what he had done.

He had sent back not only her old clothes, and her run-down house slippers, but the very movie magazine that she had been reading and a cheap hot water bottle that he had bought for her one night when she had had the backache from a hard day's cleaning.

Looking at it Lily remembered how gentle and tender he had been that night. . . . Yes, he had been nice sometimes, hadn't he? And when he was nice, Pat could be so much more adorably nice than anybody else on earth, she kept thinking, as she blinked hard to keep back the tears.

"Shall we carry it upstairs? I think we can. It's very light," the nurse suggested, and Lily nodded her head.

She might just as well have it upstairs, put away in the trunkroom with all the rest of the dusty old boxes and suitcases and broken trunks that stood there year after year, she decided.

"For I'll never go back to him after this," she was sure. "This is the last straw as well as the one that broke the camel's back. This is the end—when he makes it as plain as this that he hates me! When even the sight of my magazines and water bottle is unbearable to him!"

* * *

At the end of January, when Mr. and Mrs. Lexington came back from Hot Springs, Lily was as much at home in the old house as she ever had been in the days before her amazing marriage.

They came home on a gray and cheerless day and found her comfortably established with a new housemaid on the job and fresh flowers everywhere in the house, a dinner all ready for them, and Lily in a smart new dress waiting for them in front of the fire.

"We heard you were staying here," were her mother's first words to her when she came into the house. "Mrs. Cain wrote to us about it—and we didn't know what had happened."

She was as cold as she could be, standing there in the warm rosy glow of the fire and looking down at Lily, who lolled in the chair, with a lighted cigaret dangling from her long fingers. Beautiful fingers they were, pointed and white, with nails of lacquered coral.

In the month that had just passed all their blisters and calluses had practically disappeared, and they were smooth and white once more.

"What happened," Lily explained, getting out of her chair, "was just what you said would happen. Pat and I couldn't get along. We fought all the time, and—so I came home to you and Dad. Do you mind?"

Mrs. Lexington simply raised her eyebrows and looked coldly indifferent.

She turned her head presently and called over her shoulder: "Cy! Please come in here a minute."

There was a moment's pause while Mr. Lexington paid the taxicab man in the hall, and then he came limping into the room.

"Why, Dad, what's the matter?" Lily asked anxiously, but he just laughed off the idea that there might possibly be something wrong with him.

"Just old age," he said humorously, and then he bent over her and kissed her on both of her cheeks. "I had a touch of rheumatism."

"Well, well, so our Baby Girl came back," he went on, patting her head just as if she were still four or five years old. "And as soon as we heard about it we came home post-haste—"

His wife turned on him furiously, angry in a second. "That's right, start coddling and petting her again!" she advised him with sarcasm in her voice and her large-featured face. "You spoiled her before, and just see how she disgraced us!"

Her cold eyes went up and down her daughter. "Are you really here to stay now?" she asked sharply. "Because if you have any notion of ever going back to that fellow we aren't going to keep you here and let you run up a lot of bills. I'll just bet anything that you charged that dress you have on to your father—"

Lily laughed. "Oh, no, you've fixed it so I can't charge anything to my father," she answered serenely. "Please don't think that I didn't try to do it because I did—and failed, darling mother." She was just as full of sarcasm as Mrs. Lexington was, at times.

Her father began to look uneasy as he always did when the women of his family had words. "Now, now, let's not bring that up," he said briskly. "Our girl's back home and that's all that matters—"

"It is not all that matters!" his wife contradicted him with spirit. "If she's here to stay, well and good. But if she's here just long enough to get a lot of new things and then make it up with that France and go back to live with him, it's a white horse of another color."

Her eyes were on the black cloth dress that Lily wore—one of those marvelously simple dresses that cost three times as much as the fussy ones. Staley had let Lily have the money to buy it, and Lily had promised to pay him, knowing perfectly well that she never would.

But she did not tell her mother that. She let her think anything she wanted to think as she got up and walked grandly out of the room, her chin in the air.

"If I want to go back to Pat it's my own affair," she said to herself, and all at once she knew that she wanted to do it. Even now, after he had sent back all her clothes to her as if he never wanted to see her again. Even now, after this month of silence.

The longing to see him rushed over her like homesickness. She threw herself down across the lace-draped bed in her own room with her face buried in the pillows, too miserable to cry.

She heard the door open and her mother came across the room to her. She bent over her with a creaking of the old-fashioned corsets that she wore and put her arms around her.

"My dearest, I didn't mean to scold you the first minute I saw you," she said, holding her close to her silk-covered bosom. "Don't cry like this—Mother and Daddy are just afraid you'll go back to that boy again. You'll have to forgive us if we're a little harsh—"

"I'm not crying!" The girl sat bolt upright, her eyes brilliant and without a sign of a tear. She smiled a little. "You weren't very welcoming, were you? But that didn't bother me. . . . It was what you said about going back to Pat that bothered me—"

Mrs. Lexington pooh-poohed that. "Oh, nonsense. I know you're not going back to him!" she said, misunderstanding Lily completely. "Only, as I said before, it does worry your father and me a little to think that you might consider it your duty to live with him, and make yourself unhappy thinking that you weren't doing your duty if you stayed here with us."

Lily scarcely listened to her as she rambled on.

"I'm going home to Pat!" she was thinking. "He can't do any more than throw me out on my ear!"

She had no reason for going except this feeling that was like homesickness—this aching longing to see him that the mere mention of his name had brought to her.

"And how is Staley? Do you see him?" asked Mrs. Lexington, brightly, and then added in a sad and melancholy tone. "Poor fellow."

"I've seen him every day for a month," Lily answered. "Until the very sight of him makes me woozy all over."

Her mother shook her head. "That's not a very nice way to talk about a fine chap like Staley. . . . I was hoping you had come to your senses about him."

"Well, I haven't," Lily said. "I feel about him just the way I always did. I just adore his money and the thought of the wild good time I could have with it. . . . But Staley, himself, is about as exciting as a glass of luke-warm water."

An hour later her mother, coming back to her room for a nice motherly talk, found her packing a suitcase.

She had taken off the expensive black dress that she had bought with Staley Drummond's money, and she had put on an old light-colored suit that was part of her trousseau.

The suitcase was filled with the old things she had brought with her from the little honeymoon flat, and she was laying the hot-water bottle on the top of them. She stroked it with her fingers lightly, as if she were very fond of it.

"Why, where ARE you going?" asked Mrs. Lexington, her bosom suddenly heaving like a storm at sea. She knew!

"Back to my husband," Lily told her very quietly. "I had just about forgotten how much I cared about him until you started talking about him again, and calling him 'that France.' He's not 'that France.' He's my husband, and I love him. I'm going home." She snapped the case shut.

Then, at the door of the room, she turned and looked back at her mother. "You wouldn't let both him and me live here, would you?" she asked [illegible]. "It would be lovely, Mother. Really it would. . . . And Pat's hardly ever at home during the week. You'd hardly have to see him around the house—I just hate the thought of going back to that old cook stove and washing machine, and the food chopper and the ice-box!"

CHAPTER L.

SOMETIMES—but not so very often Mrs. Lexington was too upset to speak.

This was one of those times.

For a full minute she stood facing her only daughter with her eyes as cold as lumps of gray ice in her face and her mouth opening and closing without making a sound.

Then her words came with the force of a small explosion: "Bring your husband here to this house?" Well, I just guess not." Her lips came down on the last word like a hammer blow.

Lily shrugged her shoulders. "All right, mother, I just thought you and my father might like to have me here instead of our never seeing one another, as we have been doing," she explained. "I can't be happy living away from Pat. But if you knew how hard I have to work when I'm with him, and how little money I have, you'd change your mind about our coming here, I know. After all, you don't want me to spend all my life slaving in a two-by-four flat, while you and Dad rattle around in this big place, do you? And we could pay you some board." Her voice died away on a plaintive note, and her eyes pleaded with her mother.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

ELEANOR LINCOLN and George Jackson hardly had time to recover from the first verbal bombshell thrown by Mrs. Townsend before she tossed another into the conversational arena.

"I wonder where I saw that picture," she said, patently searching her memory. "It was a large portrait, and the dog was exactly like this one, but the girl was like you and yet she wasn't. Oh! [illegible] I can remember what I see, but when it comes to 'where' and 'when' I am hopeless. It must have been when I was traveling in Europe last year, however. My remembrance of the picture is that it had something foreign about it. Oh! I know now where I can find out where I saw it. I bought photographs of many of the pictures I liked. Perhaps that one is among them. If it is, I'll bring it over to you some day and let you see your double and Fedor's."

"That will be very good of you," Eleanor Lincoln replied steadily. But that she was terrified by the prospect of Mrs. Townsend's discovering the picture she had mentioned, I could see readily, and I was sure also that young Mr. Jackson shared her uneasiness.

Something outside myself urged me to continue the grueling by further discussing the picture which Mrs. Townsend had seen. But sheer compassion for the fright in my young hostess' face made me change the subject precipitately.

"I'm sorry to interrupt so interesting a discussion," I said, "but we really must not stay any longer and I must get my errand accomplished. I came over to ask you and your uncle and aunt to come to dinner informally with us next Saturday evening. We are welcoming home our dearest friends, Mrs. Underwood and her daughter, and Mr. Philip Veritzen is also to be our guest."

Into Eleanor Lincoln's eyes flashed vivid interest and delight. I saw that for the minute I had succeeded in banishing the terror which Mrs. Townsend's artless talk had engendered.

"Oh! I should love to come to your dinner," she said enthusiastically. "And I shall so enjoy meeting Mr. Veritzen. It has been my dream for months."

Mrs. Townsend was looking at me eagerly—and I saw with astonishment that there was envy in the look.

"Do you mean the Philip Veritzen?" she queried.

"The theatrical producer," I replied, and she clasped her hands dramatically.

"Aren't you the fortunate hostess?" she exclaimed. "And you speak of it as casually as if he were the local curate. If I didn't have a dinner engagement myself for Saturday, I should be on my knees to you angling for a chance to meet that man."

We all laughed at her nonsense and the pretty extravagance with which she uttered it. But I had a sudden flash of intuition. Her kindly heart and her real liking for young Mr. Jackson was giving me a chance to extend an invitation to this stranger in a strange land without the awkwardness of considering her.

"It would be granted before you asked it," I assured her. "Perhaps some other time when you have no engagement you will be kind enough to come to me for tea or dinner. I promise that, if possible, I will have the lion present and roaring properly."

Theories to Actualities Revolutionizes Industry.

By B. C. FORBES

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 11.

President E. H. Hatch of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce informs me:

"Until recently this state has done little to utilize waste from its 200 logging camps and 800 sawmills, with their annual production of six billion feet of lumber. It has been content merely to saw trees and lumber. Now, however, methods for utilizing new woods and old waste promise to make the pulp and paper industry bring in as much money into Washington as the present sawmill industry—something like $350,000,000 new money a year."

There you have a shining example of what is being accomplished by wedding inventive and scientific skill to practical industry.

IN one year some $15,000,000 has been invested or authorized for investment in new additions to pulp and paper plants in this region, largely by successful mill operators. This development is logical, since Puget Sound has cheap, plentiful raw material, abundant, clear water, cheap power, ample, efficient labor, low construction costs, and, by reason of cheap water transportation, ready access to growing markets.

Then, in Western Washington there are great stands of spruce, hemlock and cotton wood, and now fir, through an improved process, is being mixed with other woods. Pulp wood delivered at Puget Sound mills averages around $8 a cord, while eastern mills pay from $8 to $25 a cord. Fir waste can be delivered at the mills as low as $4.50 a cord.

Pure water from the Cascade and Olympic mountains, sulphur brought from the gulf region by water, local lime rock and power costing the mills $27.50 or less per horsepower per year combine to make the industry profitable.

The last statistics showed that only half of the pulp wood consumed in the United States was domestic; Canada supplied 87 per cent of the imports. Of the 840 paper mills in the United States, approximately 525 do not own pulp plants. Japan is becoming an increasingly important consumer of pulp. And Puget Sound, the people here constantly and very properly remind you, is the nearest gateway to the Orient.

THIS telegram from President J. F. Hockey of the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce featured pulp and paper developments there:

"Your readers will be interested to know that Union Bag and Paper Company, New York, is now building a $2,000,000 pulp and paper mill here. Pennsylvania Salt Company has just acquired property for $1,000,000 chemical plant. Great Western Electric-Chemical Company, San Francisco, has acquired property for $500,000 chemical plant. All outside capital.

"City of Tacoma is issuing bonds to develop water supply of 200,000,000 gallons daily. Also bonds for new 50,000-horsepower hydro-electric power plant. City spent $700,000 last year for new power installations, $1,500,000 for new water installations.

"Investments in new industries announced for Tacoma last year will exceed $5,000,000, giving us second place on Pacific coast. Local capital is financing two pulp mills with investment in excess of $1,000,000.

"Pacific coast is going ahead toward balanced prosperity. An inspiring picture, is it not?"

SEATTLE'S industrial growth has been diversified. Not many years ago her only manufactures were from her sawmills and fish salteries. Today her 1,500 odd plants turn out such products and amounts as: Food and kindred products, fully $30,000,000; iron and steel, $15,000,000; lumber and allied products, fully $17,000,000; paper and printing, almost $8,000,000; chemicals and allied products, nearly $18,000,000; machinery, $7,300,000, etc.

This will interest you: The Boeing Airplant, one of the three largest in America, employs 750 men. Westerns are becoming air minded.

MANUFACTURERS declare that labor produces better here than in the East. One manufacturer having plants in New Jersey and Seattle analyzed costs and found that he got approximately 20 per cent more here for the wages paid, thanks mainly to equable climate and the larger percentage of native-born labor—Seattle ranks second for all American cities in its low rate of illiteracy.

STOCKS MIXED WITH TREND UPWARD

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—(AP.)—Further irregularity in today's stock market, but the main price tendency appeared to be upward. Strength of the packing issues, nearly all of which attained new high levels for the year, contrasted with the weakness of the oils, five of which sank to the lowest prices in a year or more. Consistent strength of the rail shares, more than a dozen of which advanced 1 to 3 points, was one of the day's features.

There was little in the overnight news to influence the price movement. Yellow Truck common turned weak in reflection of the passing of the preferred dividend, and some selling also came into the other motor shares. Selling pressure also was apparent against Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, Consolidated Gas, Detroit Edison and Vanadium Steel.

Pathe A, which sold down to 8½ on Thursday, rallied 4⅜ points overnight to 14⅜. Gold Dust ran up close to par to a new high record and American Snuff, American Zinc common and preferred, Bon Ami, Brooklyn Edison, General Railway Signal and American Smelting sold 2 to nearly 4 points higher.

The closing was firm. Total sales approximated 1,300,000 shares.

DIXIE GAS PFD. MOVES UP

Pittsburgh Plate Glass scored a further sharp gain on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, opening with an overnight advance of six points at 226 with only a few shares available at that figure.

The spurt followed yesterday's sharp upturn which resulted from the report that plate glass plants are busier than they have been for several months and the announcement of the organization of a new company by Pittsburgh Plate and the Du Ponts to manufacture the new safety glass for automobiles.

Dixie Gas preferred was another strong issue in the high-priced group, advancing to a new high on the current movement in response to steady demand.

Carnegie Metals displayed a strong tone also and improved its market position by more than a point from yesterday's low. While the turnover in Carnegie was not large, the buying demand was persistent and not a great deal of stock apeared to be for sale under 24½. Expected improvement in metal prices and advances in some of the mining shares in New York was thought responsible for today's advance.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass displayed further strength with an overnight gain of six points. Opening sale at 226, compared with last night's close at 220. Dixie Gas preferred also moved higher as demand for the issue disclosed the shortage of stock for sale around current levels.

"Service with Security"
and Amoco-Gas helps them deliver it!

A big fleet owner such as the National Delivery Association, Inc., doesn't guess at costs. They figure "cost per mile" as carefully as a railroad—make comparative tests of fuels—check operating expenses daily. You'll see in their letter that they credit AMOCO-GAS with "more miles per gallon and lower operating expense." And that's not guesswork—they know!

BUGS BAER Says

YOU must admire the way the British accomplish their government details. They opened their parliament this week in a blaze of horticulture, oratory and haberdashery.

An opening of Congress means nothing. The boys straggle in, toss their overcoats into the cloakroom and then settle down for busy naps. The overcoats are never checked.

Not because the boys trust each other, but because each one hopes to get a better one when he leaves.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

Then Mr. Coolidge strolls in, reads his speech, and Congress adjourns so suddenly that the reporters wake up.

There is no pomp, glory nor pride of heraldry. There hasn't been a well-dressed man in Congress since the fire inspectors requested J. Ham Lewis to wear a milder necktie or bob his pink whiskers.

But in England they weigh their etiquette on a bigger scale. The king drives up in a gold and glass coach of state to the fanfare of trombones. His speech is on a gold scroll, with punctuation in silver and applause in platinum.

While he reads there is clapping of jeweled hands and audible cheering from precious filled teeth.

The peers, barons and dukes are attired in scarlet robes, patched with ermine and repaired with gold lace. The ladies are harnessed in riggings of pearls and the queen wears a tiara of diamonds with only the ocean to protect her from the Chicago racketeers.

We would certainly like to see Mr. Coolidge tossing up Pennsylvania avenue in a gold and glass aquarium and Nick Longworth dressed like a stick of peppermint candy.

And it would be great when a modern decatur arose during a time of national emergency and said: "My country, may she always be right, but right or wrong, my cane and spats."

We could picture old Joe Cannon blowing cigar smoke through a diamond tiara. Not that Uncle Joe didn't believe in ancertral honors, for he could trace his old fedora hat back through six centuries.

Still, we manage to scramble through the traffic without the aid of frills and one-way etiquette.

The accounts of the opening of parliament fail to mention the presence of Prince Eddie.

Eddie apparently was not there. Or either the king borrowed Eddie's high hat, or Eddie started for the meeting on horseback.

THE SUN-TELEGRAPH

The President's Appeal for an Unfettered, Patriotic American Press Upholds Position of Hearst Papers

President Coolidge issued a clarion call to patriotic journalism in his address dedicating the magnificent new $10,000,000 building of the National Press Club in Washington last Saturday night.

The President, like every other intelligent reader of American newspapers, is daily impressed with the fact that the foreign correspondents of certain American newspapers are more interested in furthering the interests of foreign governments than in furthering the interests of the United States.

Correspondents—Americans living abroad—ACT like the paid propagandists of foreign governments. Newspaper men can be paid and influenced more subtly than by the use of money. The number of Legion of Honor ribbons in the possession of American reporters in Paris is notorious.

The anti-American attitude of these correspondents is too often supported by the editorial policies of their papers at home. When our representatives at Geneva were negotiating with England regarding restriction of cruiser tonnage, there were American newspapers that supported the British claim to mastery of the seas. No British newspaper has ever been found advocating American maritime supremacy. Why cannot American papers be as loyal to the interests of their country?

The President was referring to such conditions when he told the National Press Club on Saturday:

"Whenever any of the press of our country undertake to exert their influence in behalf of foreign interests, the candor of the situation would be greatly increased if their foreign connections were publicly disclosed. All public business ought to be publicly conducted.

"Foreign interests have the privilege of being represented here. The right to fair treatment is as wide as humanity. But when foreign governments are represented here, their agents are required to become publicly accredited and be publicly received."

In other words, the President wants to stop this business of foreign governments influencing American governmental policies by subtle control of the American press.

The dangers are real dangers, against which all patriotic newspapers must be on their guard. On January 30, a week before the President made his address, William Randolph Hearst sent to the executives of all his publications a letter reproduced on this page. It suggests the retirement of any Hearst employee who accepts any favor or decoration from a foreign government.

The very first requirement of a free American press is that the press shall be free of domination or influence by foreign governments seeking their own interest at the expense of our own country.

Mr. Hearst's Instructions to His Organization Issued Jan. 30

To all Publishers and Editors and Managers of News Services.

Gentlemen:

In view of certain matters which have arisen, I would like to repeat the advice I have previously given to all representatives of the Hearst newspapers and news services to be exceedingly careful not to accept favors from any individual or agency that may desire to put our representatives or our institution under obligations.

Absolute independence of all political, financial or other influences which might use any news service or newspaper for their own advantage has been one of the greatest assets of the Hearst papers and news services.

The object of our institution is to serve the public only and to present the news without bias or prejudice of any kind.

It is impossible for our representatives to accept favors from powerful influences and agencies without being under obligations to those influences and agencies and subject to demand for favors in return.

It is a fundamental rule of our institution not to be under obligations to any politicians or political parties, or governmental departments in our own country.

It is our policy to ask no favors from the government in our own country, but to be entirely free to take any attitude or pursue any course that we believe to be in the public interest.

IT IS STILL MORE IMPORTANT FOR OUR INSTITUTION AND ITS REPRESENTATIVES TO BE FREE FROM ANY OBLIGATION TO FOREIGN POLITICIANS AND GOVERNMENTS, ESPECIALLY WHEN THERE ARE CONTROVERSIES BETWEEN THOSE FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS AND THE GOVERNMENT OF OUR OWN COUNTRY, AND WHEN WE MUST IN COMMON LOYALTY TO OUR OWN PEOPLE TAKE THE PART OF OUR OWN GOVERNMENT AND COME INTO CONFLICT WHEREEVER NECESSARY WITH THE ATTITUDES AND DESIRES OF FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS WHICH MAY BE IN OPPOSITION TO THE BEST INTERESTS OF OUR OWN PEOPLE AND OUR OWN NATION.

I AM DISTINCTLY AND DEFINITELY OPPOSED TO ANY REPRESENTATIVE OF OUR NEWSPAPERS OR NEWS SERVICES RECEIVING ANY DECORATIONS OR HONORARIUM FROM ANY FOREIGN GOVERNMENT, EXCEPT FOR PATRIOTIC SERVICE RENDERED AMERICA'S ALLIES IN TIME OF WAR.

IF, HOWEVER, ANY REPRESENTATIVE OF OUR INSTITUTION DOES DESIRE TO EXERCISE HIS PERSONAL PRIVILEGE TO ACCEPT A PEACE TIME DECORATION FROM ANY FOREIGN GOVERNMENT AND INCUR THE CONSEQUENT OBLIGATION, I WOULD LIKE HIM TO DO IT ENTIRELY FROM A PERSONAL STANDPOINT, AND I WOULD LIKE HIM TO REMOVE THE POSSIBILITY OF PLACING HIS NEWSPAPER OR HIS NEWS SERVICE UNDER SUCH OBLIGATION, OR HIMSELF AS THE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE NEWSPAPER OR NEWS SERVICE, BY RETIRING FROM THE EMPLOYMENT OF THE NEWSPAPER OR THE NEWS SERVICE, SO THAT THERE WILL BE NO DOUBT IN HIS MIND OR ANYONE'S ELSE THAT THE FAVOR CONFERRED UPON HIM IS PURELY A PERSONAL ONE, AND THAT THE NEWSPAPER OR THE NEWS SERVICE IS UNDER NO OBLIGATION WHATSOEVER.

I hope and believe that our representatives will all take pride in this independence of our institution from extraneous influence; and I hope that this independence will become so thoroughly recognized that foreign governments and all other selfish agencies and influences will realize that they cannot affect the attitude or actions of our newspapers and news services by any kind of bribery or cajolery or by any force or any favoritism.

I believe that we will then all rejoice in the respect which governments and other powerful agencies will have for us and which we will have for ourselves.

Sincerely your,
WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

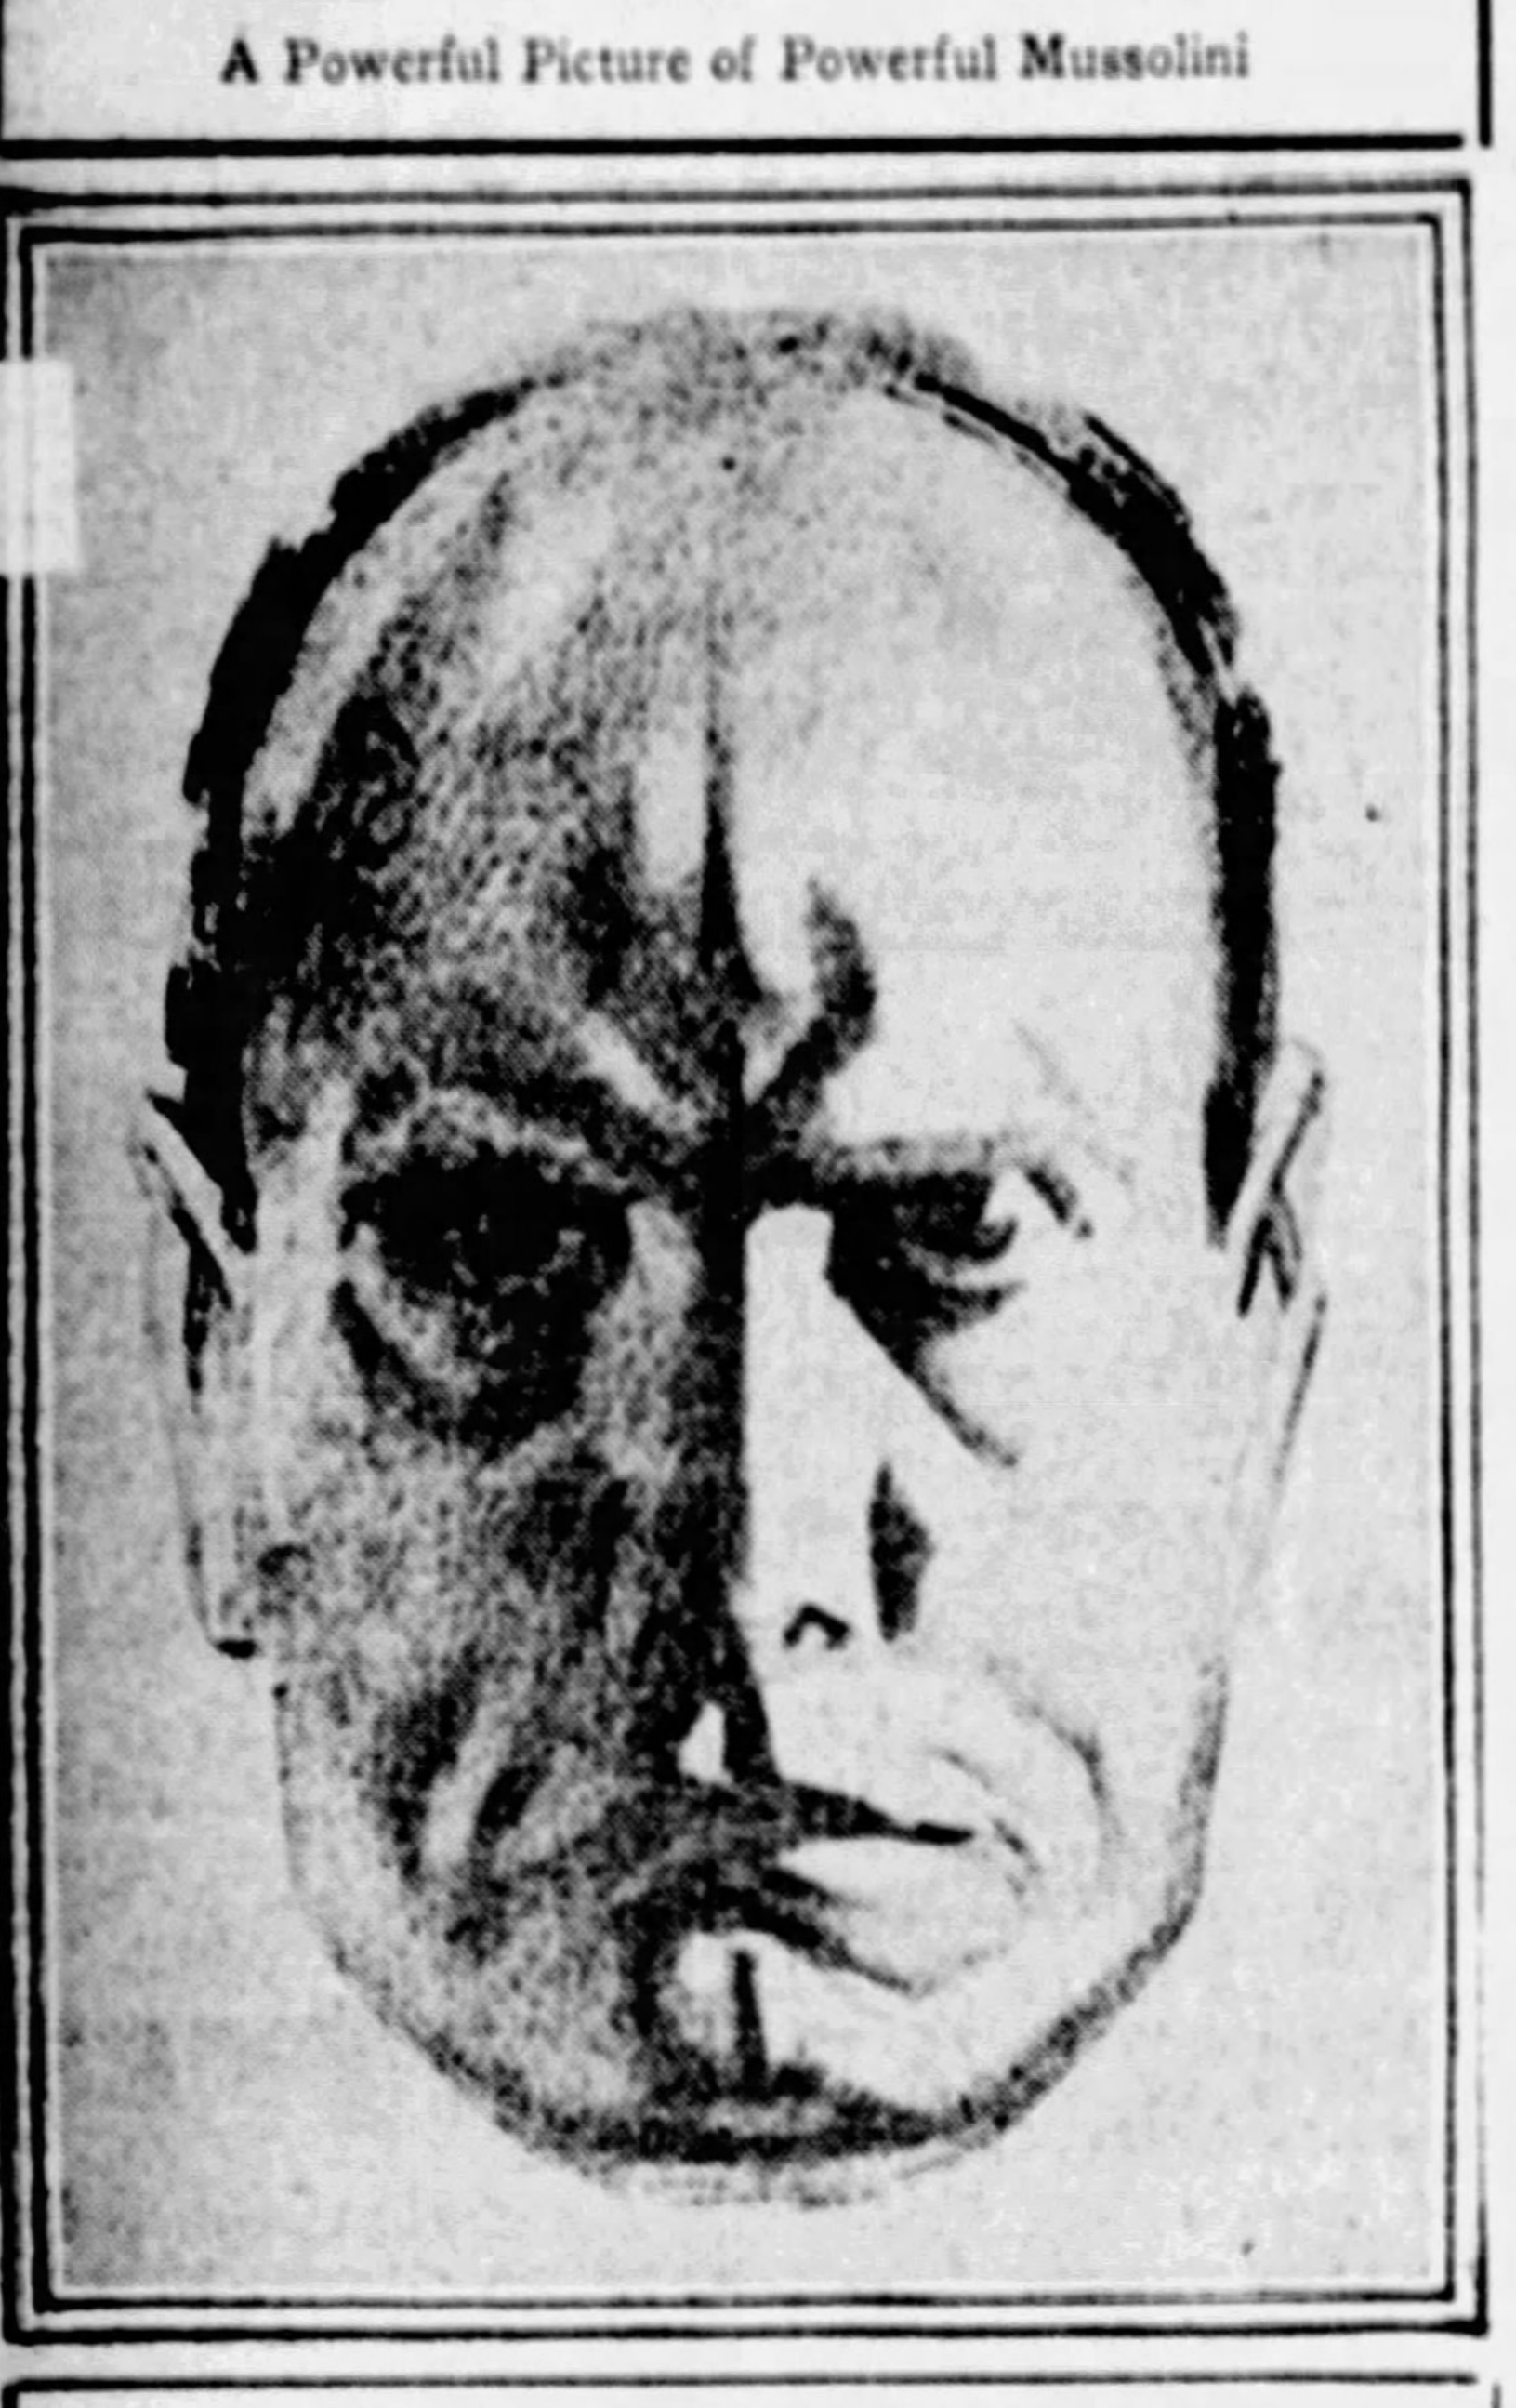
He "Bends" Souls

A Powerful Picture of Powerful Mussolini



LATEST PORTRAIT OF A POWERFUL MAN.

All the world knows Benito Mussolini. Italy looks up to him as her deliverer, believing that after the war the choice was Mussolini or Bolshevism, and that Bolshevism would have been fatal.

Under Mussolini's rule, under his will as strong as steel, steady and irresistible as the movement of a glacier, Italy has come back from her war depression, the Italian people have worked, Italy's power has spread to new lands, and the League of Nations itself has known that when HE says "NO" it means "NO."

Under this picture, drawn for L'Illustrazione Italiana by Enrico Sacchetti, was printed this saying of Mussolini's: "My father was a blacksmith, and I have worked with him. He bent iron; mine is the harder task of bending souls."

When he achieved rulership in Italy, submitting king, legislature and people to his will, Mussolini found himself possessed of marvelous human material with which to work.

He had in that great Italian nation the inherited powers of old Rome, a race of conquerors and builders. He had the genius of a race that has produced such men as Michaelangelo, Leonardo, Christopher Columbus, and, in our day, Verdi in music and Marconi in science.

When he started, as he calls it, "to bend souls," Mussolini had for his material souls and bodies WORTH WHILE.

He has "bent them" to his own will, making hours of labor longer and work harder.

He has told workers that he would not let them strike, and they don't DARE strike. And he has told employers he would not let them oppress their workers, and they do not DARE oppress them.

This powerful son of an Italian blacksmith is one of the great, interesting figures of history.

What will happen when he goes, and when his soul in its turn is "bent," as Eternal Wisdom may determine?

No man can say. But Mussolini at least has shown the direction that a people should take after a great devastating war. He has shown that hard work, intense concentration, devotion to patriotic duty will overcome any handicap.

He has also very frankly said that the word "liberty" does not appeal to him. He has, perhaps, made it difficult for any that shall try to take his place.

Such a "bender of souls" is not easily replaced.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Planets' Shapes and Orbits

"It has occurred to me to write you in regard to a matter to which I have given some thought and not a little wonder. Why is it that in all printed figures of this and other planets they are pictured as perfect spheres, when, of course, they are not? And why is the earth's orbit shown as a perfect circle, when it is really elliptical?—S. T. H., Uniontown, Pa."

IT IS because our sense of vision is not so delicate in its appreciation of slight differences of shape as to make it evident to the eye that a globe which is one-300th greater in diameter through its equator than through its poles is not perfectly spherical in outline. A large school globe, three feet in diameter, if it could be made in exact imitation of the earth's true shape, would be depressed less than a sixteenth of an inch at each pole—an amount that would be entirely insensible to the eye. The earth, you know, is about 8,000 miles in diameter, the depression at each pole amounting to only thirteen miles. These are simply approximate figures.

The earth's orbit departs from a true circle by an eccentricity of 0.0167, that is to say, it is about one-sixtieth greater in diameter one way than the other. The orbit being elliptical, with the sun placed in focus of the ellipse, and the mean distance from the sun being by measure about 93,000,000 miles, the eccentricity just mentioned makes the difference between the major and minor diameters of the orbit about 3,000,000 miles—which is the amount by which the earth's distance from the sun increases from the beginning of January to the first week of July.

Now, 1-60th, to be sure, is much greater than 1-300th, and yet, if you make a large scale drawing of an ellipse having the same eccentricity as that of the earth's orbit and place it beside a drawing of a perfect circle, the eye is practically insensible of any difference.

This indifference of human sensitiveness to small irregularities is, of course, a constant burden to science, whose ideal is exactitude, though it may be a balm indispensable to the serenity of human life and society. However, all the planets are not, as you hastily say, pictured as perfect spheres. All good pictures of the planet Jupiter, for instance, are drawn distinctly elliptical in outline, and photographs of that huge planet plainly show that it is by no means a true sphere. The eye, in looking at them, is immediately aware of the considerable difference between the equatorial and the polar diameter of Jupiter. The oblateness is about 1-15.4, or between a 15th and a 16th.

The equatorial diameter is about 88,640 miles, and the polar diameter about 82,880 miles, so that the total polar flattening amounts to no less than 5,760 miles. If you observe Jupiter with even a small telescope, provided that it has a sufficient magnifying power to show the planet's disk clearly, you will at once perceive that it is drawn out in the direction of the great belts bordering its equator.

The planet Saturn, too, is very decidedly elliptical in outline, and is seen thus in photographs and in all careful drawings of it. Its oblateness much exceeds that of Jupiter, being about one-tenth, so that the polar flattening amounts to 7,800 miles, though the mean diameter is 14,900 miles less than that of Jupiter.

To return for a moment to the shapes of the planets' orbits, while that of the earth is so near a circle that the eye notices no departure from circularity in a drawing, yet this is not true of all the orbits. The orbit of Mercury, in particular, is so eccentric (0.2056) that the distance of the little planet from the sun ranges from 28,550,000 miles at perihelion to 43,350,000 miles at aphelion; and only six weeks elapses during the passage from one extreme to the other!

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

"Dog-in-the-Manger"

WHAT sort of logic do you use in your plans to advance in the place where you are employed?

Do you avoid helping the man above you because you fear that if he makes a good showing it will make him more secure in his position and hinder your own progress?

Suppose you look at it from another standpoint, that the better he becomes the sooner he will be promoted and the sooner you get the opportunity to succeed him.

If that fellow is the right sort, your assistance will boost him and helping him is a good way to become familiar with the requirements of his job.

In your scheme, are you planning some sharp practice to avoid real work?

Don't be foolish! Study to win in a legitimate way and keep success.

There is no easy road to the top.

The last laps are the hardest, but the gain is worth the effort.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Once You Have Wandered

ONCE you have wandered out to distant shores
And glimpsed the beauty there,
Have voyaged where the farthest ocean roars
On coasts exotic, fair,

You can not turn away and be content
With narrow fields again;
Your tranquil pleasures will be strangely bent
With ceaseless sense of pain.

Once you have known the light of some great soul
Aflame with heaven's own fire,
No feeble rays, no lesser spirit's dole
Can sate your deep desire.

Brain Power

THE Neurological Institute is to investigate why man, at his smartest, uses only one-fifth of his potential brain power.

Perhaps it is because so many of us are mentally lazy. The way to learn how to think is to do more thinking.

Ye Towne Gossip

THE VERY first time.

* * *

SOME WEEKS ago.

* * *

THEY MADE themselves known.

* * *

IN THE live oak tree.

* * *

OUTSIDE THE windows.

* * *

OF OUR sleeping porch.

* * *

AND AWAKENED me.

* * *

FROM PEACEFUL sleep.

* * *

I KNEW right away.

* * *

THAT THEY were owls.

* * *

AND STRANGELY enough.

* * *

IN SPITE of the fact.

* * *

THEY HAD wakened me.

* * *

I WELCOMED them.

* * *

AND WENT back to sleep.

* * *

AND THE next night came.

* * *

AND OTHER nights.

* * *

AND IT wasn't long.

* * *

AND I'D awaken.

* * *

WITH THOSE pesky owls.

* * *

OUTSIDE MY window.

* * *

AND I'D lie there.

* * *

TILL THEY'D make me mad.

* * *

WITH THEIR carryings on.

* * *

AND THEN I'D get up.

* * *

AND SHOO at them.

* * *

AND CLAP my hands.

* * *

AND THEN I'D hear.

* * *

THEIR FLUTTERING wings.

* * *

AND ALL would be quiet.

* * *

FOR AN hour or two.

* * *

OR UNTIL the next night.

* * *

AND ANYWAY.

* * *

WE'D BEEN sore at them.

* * *

FOR TWO or three weeks.

* * *

AND SEEKING a way.

* * *

TO DRIVE them off.

* * *

TO SOMEWHERE else.

* * *

AND THEN I was asked

* * *

TO CLIMB to the attic.

* * *

TO SEARCH for something.

* * *

AND SO I did.

* * *

AND IN THE half light

* * *

THAT LIES up there.

* * *

AND PERCHED on the end.

* * *

OF TWO vent pipes.

* * *

THAT SERVED as doors.

* * *

FOR THE pair of them.

* * *

WERE OUR two little owls.

* * *

AND THEY lifted their heads.

* * *

AND BLINKED their eyes.

* * *

FOUR BIG round eyes.

* * *

AND LOOKED at me.

* * *

AND WENT back again.

* * *

TO THEIR day time sleep.

* * *

AND NOW they're ours

* * *

AND PART and parcel.

* * *

OF OUR household.

* * *

WHETHER WE want them.

* * *

OR WHETHER we don't.

* * *

AND WE'RE going to find out.

* * *

WHAT THEY like to eat.

* * *

AND WE'LL have to get used.

* * *

TO THE noise in the tree.

* * *

AND THE CHILDREN are planning.

* * *

THAT AFTER A while.

* * *

WE'LL GET THEM DOWN stairs.

* * *

WITH THE rest of us.

I THANK you.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The most conspicuous of that goofy gentry New York knows as "gate crashers" are "One Eye" Connolly and Tammany Young. They have made it a life work, despite the fact rewards are largely a lot of kidding publicity.

Connolly and Young, however, are merely professional representatives of a huge army of people, thrilled to the marrow by a free pass to any sort of entertainment and will go to extraordinary lengths to achieve it.

Hundreds are matching their wits nightly against ticket takers at theaters, prize fights and wrestling bouts. The majority are able to pay for their admissions and the performance does not particularly interest them. The wallop is in outsmarting guardians of the gate.

They will pose as doctors, messenger boys, out-of-town critics and even throw fake fits in the lobby so that in the excitement they can slide by the door tender. First-night performances are the particular meat. Their various dodges smack of genius.

There is one gate crasher who does his crashing in full evening dress. He watches for a large group similarly attired and edges along to the door where, to all appearances, he becomes one of them and passes in undisturbed. He leaves them and stands in the rear of the house.

Some wear police badges. Others go early with musical cases as though a part of the orchestra. And there have been arrests for posing as policemen and firemen. Aside from the gate crashers there is even a larger army of whom an Annie Oakley—or a complimentary ticket—is the most prized of all possessions.

They will spend ridiculous sums to acquire them from attaches of theaters, and failing, swallow their pride and ask boxoffice men to punch holes in the purchased tickets to make them appear complimentary.

Outside of the stage and movies no agency has—to swipe Ziegfeld's pet phrase for the moment—so glorified the American girl as the magazine cover. Girls who emblazoned covers with their beauty have frequently gone like a shot to theatrical and screen stardom.

Others have figured in high scandals, some have modestly married and still others just passed from public notice. One model for Dean Cornwell was the girl whose society was chosen by the Prince of Wales on his last visit and in whose tea many debutantes would like to have dropped something unlike sugar.

I note with anguish as one long devoted to gumdrops they are no longer called that name. In candy emporiums they present supreme jellies, but pull off their beards and they are just country gumdrops. My happiest Christmas on a Missouri farm centers about an orange in a net sack, a red wagon, known as "The Little Daisy," and a huge poke of gumdrops. Something must be done to keep the gumdrop old-fashioned.

The Best Loved Face

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The best loved face in the world, also the best known face, is that of Abraham Lincoln.

Sometimes you look at it and wonder why.

It has no form nor comeliness nor beauty in it that we should admire him.

He is not a handsome Greek figure and he is no sheik nor pretty man.

He is not a big bruiser, such as some men admire, nor the sort of man that most women admire.

He has no Napoleonic figure, never strutted nor took poses.

Usually we picture him as standing in modest simplicity, somewhat shy, yet the embodiment of common sense.

It calls to mind the fact that one's beauty is not in the features nor form, but in the soul.

A beautiful soul can elighten the most homely face.

Lincoln's soul was full of the most homely virtues, virtues that appealed to men of all races.

The thing is that he stands for qualities with which we are all familiar and toward which we all aspire.

He was honest, kind and firm, and while he did most idealistic things his feet were always on the ground.

To imitate Napoleon is to be a poseur or try to discard the conventions of the world because we have a swollen ego. To imitate other heroes may lead us astray.

It harms no man or boy to imitate Abraham Lincoln.

We need his broad charity to all and we need none the less his firmness to do the right as God gave him to see the right.

America is truly fortunate in having a figure like Abraham Lincoln, standing out like a peak in its history and moulding the characters of the coming generations.

Take it all in all, America has been peculiarly fortunate in her Presidents. Men like George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Calvin Coolidge have been outstanding figures in patriotism and well worthy of the imitation of youth. No President has been made the subject of a scandal as far as his personal actions are concerned. Democracy has done pretty well and its results average higher than heredity or other schemes of choosing rulers.

LISTEN, WORLD! ELSIE ROBINSON Says: Remember Toe Nails

NEWSPAPER work is hard on illusions. One sees such appalling cruelty, cowardice and trickery. Sometimes everything fine seems blotted out.

When those times came, I used to hate life. I let my bitterness run amuck. I sneered at God and Man and all this futile, beastly farce of existence—I would emerge from those hate orgies, sick and beaten, poisoned by my own despair. But I don't any more. I have found a formula that carries me through the blackest storms.

Now, when some new, vicious evidence presents itself and I find myself slipping—I say—

"STOP! THINK!

"Think about life.

"Look at your body. Consider its history.

"Think of the gap between the human body of 1928 and that first, squirming mass of protoplasm in a protozoic swamp.

"Billions and billions and billions of years.

"First the long ages in the water. Green scum living in water—learning how to move around in water—growing stronger and more complicated in water.

"Then the first, timid reaching for a wider life, for land life, air life. But still the old grip on the water home and habits. ALWAYS THE GRIP ON THE HOME AND HABITS WHILE THE BODY TRIES TO AJDUST TO THE NEW HOME HABITS.

"Bodies evolving that could live in both air and water.' Newts. Amphibians. So gradually, the long upward climb. Skin, shells, backbones, gills, tails, legs, wings, feathers, hair, arms, hands, chins—MAN. Thousands of changes and untold years of changes.

"ALL THAT TROUBLE JUST TO MAKE A STILL IMPERFECT BODY THAT COULD EAT AND SLEEP AND MATE, AND FIGHT. THEN HOW LONG MUST IT TAKE TO MAKE A MIND THAT WILL BE BRAVE AND KIND AND HONEST AND GENEROUS AND FAIR?

"Why, our evolution is still at its beginning!

"After all these years, our bodies still remember the old homes and cling to the old habits. At times of danger or surprise we still function as though we crawled in the slime or hung in trees. Then why should we be so discouraged if our minds still wallow in the slime, or cower in caves?

"Look at yourself! You're still wearing toe nails, old dear, though the need for them passed with the mastodon. And yet you're amazed and disgusted when your neighbor exhibits toe nails on his soul!

"Snap out of it! Use your head! Give God a chance!"

That's what I say when I get all smoked up over life. Sometimes it calms me down. But not always—FOR I'M STILL MORE FITTED FOR A MIOCENE CAVE THAN I AM FOR A CIVILIZED OFFICE.
